Firing at John F.
Rippy—$3000 Found on Victim's Body.

John F. Rippy, operator of Rippy's Tavern, 3193 South Kingshighway, was shot and killed today by a holdup man in the bar.

The robber, who appeared to have no accomplices, fled through the front door. Police believe he did not obtain any loot, because more than $3000 was found in Rippy's clothing at City Hospital, where he was pronounced dead on arrival. He had been shot four times, once in the chest, as he grappled with his assailant.

Mrs. Earline Earls, 3737 Washington boulevard, the barmaid, said Rippy had just come in and had walked behind the bar to the cash register. Mrs. Earls assumed he had come from the Easton-Taylor Trust Co., where it was his custom to cash payroll checks on Fridays. As Rippy reached the cash register, the robber walked in the front door. He said: "This is a holdup—don't move," she told police.

Disregarding the command, Rippy ran from behind the bar and grappled with the man. During the scuffle, about five shots were fired, one shattering a mirror behind the bar and others striking Rippy. Chairs and bar stools were turned over.

After the shooting, the robber ran out the front door. He did not get behind the bar. Mrs. Earls said she did not know whether he obtained any loot.

Mrs. Earls said the robber was about 35 years old and stocky build. She said he was wearing a light blue work cap with a visor. Police reports indicated he also was wearing a woman's silk stocking pulled over his head and face. No one saw whether he fled on foot or in an automobile.

A pistol which had not been fired was found in the dead man's clothing. He apparently had been unable to draw it. A customer, Jewell A. Coleman, 7163 Lyndover place, Maplewood, was playing a juke box in the rear and said he did not witness the shooting. There was a cook in the rear of the establishment who also did not see the incident.

Rippy, 59 years old, lived at 4893 Kosuth avenue. He had operated a bar at Kingshighway and Page boulevard for many years and had moved to his present location less than a year ago. He had indicated to friends his intention of selling the place and entering the motel business in Florida.

SAYS SPUTNIK III HAS SHOWN
FIERCE ELECTRON CURRENTS

LONDON, Oct. 3 (AP)—A Soviet professor said today Sputnik III had shown that electron currents buzzing around the upper atmosphere were much fiercer than expected—but that space travelers should still get through them. "Energies up to 10,000 electron volts were recorded," he said. "It was a complete surprise," said Prof. Valerian Krasovsky in an interview broadcast by Moscow radio.

He expressed disagreement with American theories that the currents emanated from the sun. Nor were they components of cosmic rays, the professor said. The intensity of these currents makes study of cosmic rays more difficult, Krasovsky told Tass news agency.

Plan for Merging City, County
In Single Government Is Offered3 Freeholders Suggest a Municipal County of St. Louis in Fifth Proposal to Be Submitted to Board.

A new single government to replace the present governments of St. Louis, St. Louis County and all county municipalities was proposed to the Metropolitan Board of Freeholders last night.

Authors of the plan, board chairman Charles F. Vatterott Jr., and Freeholders Richard D. Shewmaker and James S. McClellan, suggested the new governmental structure be named "The Municipal County of St. Louis."

The three freeholders also submitted an alternate and less ambitious plan for a metropolitan district authority to perform limited functions. But they emphasized their personal preference for the bolder "one government" proposal. A total of five plans now has been submitted to the board.

Under the proposed new central government, the City of St. Louis and the 97 municipalities in the county would become boroughs, and thus retain their identity. But they would not have power to tax. The Metropolitan Sewer District would be absorbed by the new government.

The plan provides for election of a mayor and legislative council on party tickets. The mayor would be elected by area-wide vote, and the councilmen by vote in districts to be established equitably without any effort being made to follow present municipal or county lines.

Shewmaker, who introduced the proposal, said it provides "a fresh start for the future."

"It does not create an additional layer of government," he said. "It is a plan which does not leave its most important part to future constitutional amendment, and which does not involve subjecting the county to the rule of the present governing authorities of the city."

"It does not involve anyone swallowing anybody else."

Under the proposal, the offices of the mayor and Board of Aldermen in St. Louis, and those of the county supervisor and County Council would cease to exist when the new municipal county's officials were prepared to take over their duties. Similarly, offices

BECOMES GRIND
FOR RUSSIAN

The New York Herald Tribune Post-Dispatch Special Article.

MOSCOW, Oct. 3.—A Russian's continuing and dogged search for a kitchen meat grinder almost wrecked his marriage, he complained yesterday. He still is without the grinder.

He said his requests in several stores for a meat grinder were countered with attempts to saddle him with electric waffle irons. He said he had been stalking a meat grinder for months, from store to store and finally on up to the Moscow Trade Commission.

His wife, suspecting he might have been chasing other prey, threatened to divorce him, he said.

To prove he was interested only in kitchen appliances, the Russian enrolled his wife in the meat grinder hunt, but to no avail.

"Giving and receiving," said ballerina Patricia Marjorie Mariott thought "love of fellow men and women, work and the spirit of life." But most agreed with comedienne Joyce Grenfell—"taking off my girdle at the end of the day."

$3,938,554 TAX
CLAIM ON ESTATE
OF G. A. BUDER SR.Value of Stock, and Transfer of Shares,
Among Issues in Dispute.By JAMES A. KEARNS JR.,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—The Government is attempting to block an additional $3,938,554 in taxes against the estate of Gustavus A. Buder, Sr., St. Louis attorney, papers on file in United States Tax Court here revealed today.

Among the issues in dispute is the value of certain stock of the Pontiac Realty Co., a holding company for the Buder building at the northwest corner of Seventh and Market streets in St. Louis. Another dispute concerns transfers of stock in the Pontiac Realty Co. made by Buder to his son, G. A. Buder Jr., which the Government contends was transferred in contemplation of death and hence was taxable to the estate.

Put at $991,754 in Return.
The estate tax return, filed after Buder's death April 14, 1954, values the net estate at $991,754. The Government contends the proper amount listed should be $7,563,199.

In arriving at the deficiency figure, the Government added $4,537,657 to the value of the estate and ruled out claimed deductions totaling $2,213,787. With the changes, the estate would be worth, for tax purposes, $6,571,444 more than set out in the return.

However, in a petition filed recently asking the Tax Court to determine that no deficiency exists, G. A. Buder Jr., executor of the estate, said:

"The extremely complex and involved facts and circumstances affecting the decedent's estate, including the pendency of numerous cases in which the estate is a party, are highly unusual and unprecedented. Such facts and circumstances rendered it impossible at the time the return was due and still render it impossible at the time of filing hereof, to determine the deficiency."

JOPLIN CASINO
IN HURRY AFTER
BLAIR COMMENTExperienced Observers Predict Gambling
There Will Be at a Standstill Until 'Heat
Goes Off.'By ROY J. HARRIS,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JOPLIN, Mo., Oct. 3.—Joplin's only big-time gambling house was closed suddenly last week after Gov. James T. Blair remarked at St. Louis that Joplin was one of the state's worst gambling spots, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

Gov. Blair made the remark when directing the Missouri Highway Patrol to knock out gambling, following Post-Dispatch disclosures about gambling in Jefferson county.

The gambling casino here was operated by Vern Wilder over his heavily-patronized restaurant and bar at 1216 Main street. Experienced observers predicted that gambling would be at a standstill in this south-west Missouri city until "the heat" generated by the Governor's remarks "goes off."

Wilder's, of course, has always been an off-and-on operation, but mostly on, according to informed citizens. Police say it is "off" whenever they visit the establishment.

It certainly was "off" yesterday when a large number of law enforcement officers from throughout the state gathered at the restaurant for an all-day session on traffic regulation. Joplin Chief of Police Roy Isgrig had charge of arrangements.

Complaints Heard.
Isgrig pointed out that Wilder "has one of the best restaurants in town." As for gambling upstairs, he said he had not any complaints.

"That is, complaints by anybody who will make a complaint that we can get a search warrant on," he added. "Without a search warrant there's just nothing we can do."

Isgrig acknowledged he had heard rumors about Wilder's activities "for the 20 years," but that he personally had never seen gambling there.

"I went through the upstairs rooms a year or more ago, but all I saw was some pool tables," he said.

The chief said he had known about $400 in fine Wilder and his associate, Harry L. Hunt, on their pleas of guilty of keeping a gaming house. Isgrig said he had nothing to do with that case, which was handled by Jasper county Sheriff George Hickman and Prosecuting Attorney William C. Myers Jr.

Court Records.
Records in the court of Magistrate Enos C. Currey show Wilder and Hunt were charged in informations last Feb. 7 on complaint of two Springfield men, George Turner and Roy Hickman. Bond was set at $500 for each defendant, but they were released on their own recognizance.

Turner, operator of a Springfield motel, in a statement to Deputy Sheriff Pay B. Graves last Jan. 9, told of his experience on several visits to Wilder's, as a result of which he wound up owing about $2000. On one visit, he said, he was accompanied by Maples, his brother-in-law.

He told of asking for Hunt at the restaurant and of being directed to the Southern Cigar Store next door, where he was taken to the upstairs room.

He said he identified himself. Continued on Page 4, Col. 5.

PRESIDENT ENTERS HOSPITAL FOR HIS ANNUAL CHECKUP

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (AP)—Smiling and jaunty, President Eisenhower entered Walter Reed Army Hospital today for a physical checkup. It is the annual going-over he has every fall.

Wearing a sporty houndstooth checkered jacket and brown slacks, Mr. Eisenhower had a brisk "hello" and handshake for Maj. Gen. Leonard D. Heaton, commander of the Army medical center. He checked in at the wing where the X-ray department is housed.

An indication of his condition 12 days before his sixtieth birthday was that, after spending tonight in the big medical center, he expected to be playing golf by lunch time tomorrow. Persons closest to him expressed belief that his stamina and general condition have improved over the past year.

His doctors were highly satisfied with the results of his September vacation in Newport, R.I., and more than pleased about the President's current practice of playing golf three times a week when he is in Washington.

The doctors realize this frequency on the golf course leads to some criticism, but they say the value of the exercise far outweighs the complaints.

G.M. EMPLOYEES
REMAIN OFF JOBS
HERE IN SPITE OF DETROIT ACCORDLocal UAW Grievances
Keep 6000 Idle at 3
Plants — National Strike Ends After 12
Hours.About 6000 General Motors
Corp. workers at three St.
Louis plants remained off their jobs today because of local grievances, despite a nationwide wage agreement reached at Detroit yesterday between the company and the United Auto Workers union.

Local negotiations had ended at 10 a.m. yesterday and employees walked out in line with a national strike call following breakdown of talks at Detroit.

Twelve hours later, however, the Detroit negotiators reached agreement on a three-year contract and the strike was called off. UAW President Walter Reuther called on union branches throughout the country to settle local grievances as soon as possible so production lines could be started again.

A company spokesman said a resumption of talks was scheduled for this morning at the Chevrolet and Fisher Body divisions, 3809 Union boulevard, and for this afternoon at the Chevrolet parts depot at Hazelwood, St. Louis county.

Roy L. Hartzell, president of UAW Local 25, said local issues pertained to safety, health and job standards and some seniority matters. Solution of one problem, that of wage inequities as between plants, would depend in part on details of the agreement reached at Detroit.

Pickets remained outside the Chevrolet and Fisher Body plants, where there are 2400 and 3200 production workers, respectively, and the parts warehouse, which has 400 workers.

G.M., UAW AGREE
ON NEW CONTRACT

DETROIT, Oct. 3 (AP)—General Motors and the United Auto Workers reached contract agreement last night after a 12-hour strike, but a return to work by 250,000 UAW members hinged on settlement of local plant grievances.

(United Press International said that this morning General Motors announced that all its plants were still shut down.)

P. Reuther hailed the G.M. national agreement as "good for the nation, good for the UAW and good for G.M." but cautioned the G.M. workers at 126 plants in 71 cities were authorized to strike to back up local demands.

Both Reuther and G.M. Vice President Louis G. Seaton expressed hope the local grievances would be settled quickly so G.M. could get into full production of 1959 cars and trucks.

Reuther told the G.M. locals to press for speedy settlement of differences and to return to work as soon as they are settled.

Support for Locals.
In a telegram to G.M. locals, he said, "Local unions which continue on strike on local issues have the full support of the G.M. department and of the international union of the UAW."

A major complaint at local levels has been so-called wage inequities in G.M. plants — different pay for similarly classified jobs. The national agreement establishes a fund into which the company will pay half a cent hourly for each worker to narrow differences.

G.M., as Ford did last month, settled with the UAW after a short-lived strike called to back up union demands.

The Ford settlement Sept. 17 came after a seven-hour strike. G.M. and the UAW got together.

TRANS-ATLANTIC
HYPNOSIS FAILS TO DETECT SMOKER

ROCHESTER, Minn., Oct. 3 (AP)—Chain smoker Harold W. Scott listened raptly for six minutes yesterday while a London hypnotist tried to talk him out of the cigarette habit by trans-Atlantic telephone.

Five seconds after hanging up Scott was dragging on a cigarette.

Eleven reporters and photographers crammed into the 45-year-old Ventura (Calif.) type-writer repairman's small hotel room here to watch Scott submit to the widely-advertised hypnotic treatment.

At 2:25 p.m. Scott snuffed out a cigarette—he says he smokes three packs a day—and called Henry Blythe in England.

After six minutes the conversation was ended. Scott put down the phone, lit a cigarette and started puffing. He said he plans to make another call to Blythe.

BIGGEST TROUBLE
C'EST LA FEMME

Copyright, 1958, The London Observer.

PARIS, Oct. 3.—Algeria, a new constitution, a shaky fiscal system, none of these is so distressing to French husbands as the feminine inroads on their traditional authority.

A survey published in Information Sociales, the monthly journal of the French Family Allowances Welfare Service, indicates French women may be taking emancipation too far.

Twenty-five per cent of all French husbands help with the washing-up, says the report, and the proportion increases the lower one goes down the social scale. Three per cent have reached the stage of having to ask their wives for help about the house.

Seventy-seven per cent of French manual workers, 61 per cent of office workers and 59 per cent of civil servants hand over all their wages to the wives and then ask for their pocket money.

Even if men still insist on wearing the pants only one out of five are allowed to choose them.

All these defeats no doubt explain the fact that 32 per cent of French husbands habitually go to the local cafe in the evening without their wives, but there are signs that even the final refuge will one day surrender to the housewives, 14 per cent of whom have already taken to following their husbands to the cafe.

COMSTOCK LODGE;
WHISKY AND DICE
FOR CORNERSTONE

CARSON CITY, Nev., Oct. 3 (AP)—The Silver Centennial Committee met in the Governor's office yesterday to decide what should be placed in the cornerstone of a monument to be dedicated at Virginia City Sunday to commemorate the 100th anniversary of the discovery of the Comstock Lode.

University Regent Roy Hardy had a long history of the lode. Other members had a piece of silver bullion, historical clippings and the usual miscellany found in cornerstone boxes.

Then came Lucius Beebe, publisher of the Virginia City Territorial Enterprise, with his offerings. They included a bottle of sour-mash whisky, a deck of playing cards, some dice and a 38-caliber bullet.

"Why, you forgot keno tickets," said Miss Phyllis Walsh. She promptly got some from a numbers game in a nearby gambling hall.

'59 Cadillac Scratched in Test
Of Parking, Bar Still Stands

A 1959 Cadillac that was tested for length in a downtown parking garage yesterday wound up with scratches on the chrome of the right rear fender. The garage stoutly reaffirmed its bar on that model today.

Earl Lindburg, general manager of Lincoln Cadillac Co., took the car to the Ninth street headquarters of City Auto Parks Co. for a trial run after reading about the prohibition.

The vice president of the parking company, Wayne J. Stedelin, did the directing. Stedelin said he scraped a post and Lindburg called out, "Hold it—you can't make it!"

Lindburg, on the other hand, maintained today that he had proved his point—that the car would go up the ramp without touching. The scratching occurred after the car got up the ramp.

In the meantime, Detroit headquarters of the Cadillac division of General Motors heard about Stedelin's complaints that new Cadillacs are too long and too ornate and advised Lindburg and his company to say no more about it. "We're not making any comment," a spokesman at Detroit said today. "After all, it's pretty silly."

TAIPEI, Formosa, Oct. 3 (UPI)—The United States embassy issued a formal statement today saying there had been no major change in United States Far Eastern policy. A Nationalist spokesman insisted the Quemoy were America's first line of defense in the Pacific.

The statement issued separately by the embassy and by Foreign Ministry spokesman Kiang Yi-seng were designed to allay Nationalist fears of another Munich in the Formosa Strait—charges made earlier by official Nationalist newspapers.

The embassy also confirmed that Ambassador Everett Drumright had relayed to the government a statement by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles affirming that the United States would not bow to Communist force in the Far East.

12 Are Wounded as Falangists Continue Protests Against New Government.

BEIRUT, Lebanon, Oct. 3 (UPI)—The Lebanese army opened fire on mobs demonstrating against the new government last night and today. At least three civilians were reported killed and 12 wounded in the last 24 hours of violence here. The wounded included a woman.

United States forces were not involved in the street clashes.

The new fighting broke out just two days after the last United States Marine units sailed from Lebanon. Some 7500 United States Army troops remain in this country.

A United States spokesman said today that gradual withdrawal of American troops is continuing with all available aircraft in use for the purpose.

Supporters of Chamoun.
The army fired on the crowds to try to crush efforts of supporters of ex-President Camille Chamoun to keep Beirut in turmoil.

Supporters of the old regime were angry at the appointment of former rebel leader Rashid Karami as Premier and his refusal to include pro-Chamoun ministers in his new cabinet.

Last night 1000 of them, led by the pro-Chamoun Christian Falangists, marched on the defense ministry. They ignored repeated commands to halt and the soldiers opened fire.

Three civilians were reported killed and five wounded in this clash.

This morning the demonstrators, 400 strong, were back on the streets. An army patrol backed by two armored cars and two tanks tried to tear down a Falangist barricade. The demonstrators fought back and again the army opened fire.

Seven More Wounded.
At least seven persons were reported wounded in this action.

At least three other major demonstrations broke out in the capital last night, and more were reported today.

In this morning's main demonstration, the 4000 pro-Chamoun demonstrators swarmed into the city.

Text of Announcement

Today's embassy statement said: "A United States embassy spokesman confirmed that a message was received from the Secretary, that it confirmed there was no change in the Secretary's position from his Sept. 25 speech and that the Secretary's message was discussed with high Chinese authorities yesterday."

"The message restated the United States position that we demand cessation of the Communist attack on the offshore islands and that we are not willing to retreat in the face of force."

Almost at the same time the Nationalist Foreign Ministry spokesman was meeting with newsmen elsewhere in Taipei.

Kiang, in response to a question, said the United States had not approached Nationalist China on the issue of withdrawing troops from the offshore islands.

Vice President Richard Nixon said today. "After all, it's pretty silly."

FAUBUS KEEPING SCHOOLS CLOSED UNLESS U.S. OK'S PRIVATE SETUP

Arkansas Governor Says People Have Voted and Law States That Buildings Will Remain Shut.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 3 (UPI)—Gov. Orval E. Faubus said today that Little Rock's four high schools would stay closed all year unless the United States Government lets them be reopened as private, segregated schools.

Faubus said at a press conference that no one had urged him to give up his fight against integrated schools and there was no chance that he would reopen them segregated.

"The people have voted and the law states they will remain closed," he said.

He was asked whether he might close the federal courts and 150 deputy United States marshals and try to reopen the schools segregated.

"There are many things that are possible," he said.

Faubus said the National Association for Advancement of Colored People may have to provide schooling for Negro high school students in Little Rock.

There are no present plans to establish Negro schools in a campaign by a corporation of white citizens to set up a system of private schools in private classrooms with contributed funds.

Faubus said he was supporting the new plan and it would succeed.

He was asked whether Congressmen Brooks Hays (Dem., Arkansas), asked him to give up the fight. Faubus said he did not choose to answer that question now.

But he said it is a "false premise" to think that a challenge of his school closing law, which a lawyer proposed to the court, was intended to give him a graceful way to re-open the schools.

The Eighth United States Court of Appeals last month temporarily restrained the School Board from turning the schools over to the private school corporation. The court will decide next Monday whether to make the order permanent.

MOVE FOR TEST OF FAUBUS LAW

Little Rock Times News Service

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct. 3—A lawyer will ask the Arkansas Supreme Court to rule on the constitutionality of the law under which Gov. Orval E. Faubus blocked the opening of high schools here.

The lawyer, Kenneth C. Coffelt, said yesterday he would appeal a decision upholding the statute "as expeditiously as possible."

The ruling was handed down Wednesday by Eugene B. Warren, special chancellor in the Pulaski (Little Rock) county civil court.

Coffelt filed the suit on the same day that Faubus invoked the law to prevent the schools from opening. The plaintiff is Mrs. Gertrude Garrett, an avowed segregationist and the wife of a Little Rock fireman.

The lawyer was asked if a decision in favor of his client would not allow the Governor to acquiesce in the opening of the schools under the Supreme Court's order without violating his pledge to prevent forced desegregation.

"You'll have to draw your own conclusions on that," replied Coffelt.

Meanwhile, Bruce Bennett, state attorney general, called reporters to his office to announce what he called "the Southern plan for peace."

The plan is a blueprint for shackling the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In the plan Bennett called for:

1. Withdrawal by Congress of the association's tax exemption privileges.
2. Prosecution by Arkansas officials of lawyers and others who "file, assist, recruit or urge others to bring integration suits."
3. Arrest under vagrancy and inciting riot statutes of those entering a community "under suspicious circumstances and who appear to be attempting to divide our people."
4. Formation of "economic safety committees" to take reprisal against those who seek to make a community a target for the N.A.A.C.P.
5. Legislation prohibiting "the continuous bonus welfare payment for each illegitimate child." He contended that Negroes were using such laws to make a community a target for the N.A.A.C.P.
6. City ordinances designed to make "certain organizations" disclose their membership and financial records "so that every community can know who prospective trouble-makers are."

ROBBED OF $45,500 IN TRAP

GROMYKO, LODGE CLASH IN U.N. ON MIDEAST CRISIS

By ALVIN H. GOLDSTEIN, A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

UNITED NATIONS, N. Y., Oct. 3—United Nations delegates were waiting today to see if Russia will move formally for an extensive U.N. General Assembly discussion of the Middle East situation.

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko attacked the United States, Britain and U.N. Secretary General Dag Hammarskjöld yesterday.

Gromyko accused American and British governments of resorting "to all sorts of pretexts" for delaying the withdrawal of United States forces from Lebanon and British troops from Jordan. He termed the report this week by Hammarskjöld on the improved situation in the Middle East as "confused, incorrect and unobjective."

After Gromyko had declined to make clear at the request of the Assembly President whether he intended to introduce the question of the Hammarskjöld report for inclusion on the Assembly docket, United States Delegate Henry Cabot Lodge angrily retorted that Gromyko's remarks were "both violent and untrue."

Cites U.S. Pullout.

Lodge hotly disputed the Soviet spokesman's accusation that the United States was "practicing obstruction" in the Middle East. He pointed out that three battalions of Marines already had been pulled out of Lebanon. He said the United States would "scrupulously live up to the U.N. resolution," urging expeditious removal of foreign forces from Lebanon and Jordan.

"We have not incited one Arab state against another," Lodge said, continuing his rebuttal. "We have no aim of creating provocation. Our aim is a peaceful world. If Soviet Communism did not keep the world stirred up all the time, we would have a peaceful world."

He added that Gromyko's words amounted to "abuse with a sinister, ulterior motive."

Prime Minister Walter Nash of New Zealand told delegates that Communist China must be represented at any debate in the U.N. on disarmament or halting nuclear weapons experiments. He agreed Red China must order a ceasefire in the Formosan Strait before the destiny of the off-shore islands of Quemoy and Matsu is determined.

De Gaulle Makes Plea for Peace in Algeria, Offers 5-Year Plan

CONSTANTINE, Algeria, Oct. 3 (AP)—

Premier De Gaulle appealed today to the Algerian rebels to halt their bloody insurrection and promised Algerians a new and better life—economically and politically.

But close ties with France must remain, he said.

De Gaulle charted a five-year program for bettering the living and working conditions of the 8,000,000 Moslems in Algeria. He promised them more and better jobs and housing, land distribution and greater educational opportunities.

He said elections will be held in Algeria within two months under the same conditions as in metropolitan France. He declared flatly:

"At least two thirds of these representatives must be Moslems."

Until now, political representation in Algeria has been heavily in favor of the 1,000,000 European residents of Algeria.

Speaking to 50,000 persons massed in a public square, De Gaulle appealed to the Algerian rebels whose insurrection is nearly four years old.

"Why kill? One should make life instead. Why destroy? The duty is to build. Why hate? One should instead co-operate."

"Stop these absurd combats and soon we will see hope bloom again everywhere on the land of Algeria. We will see the prisons empty and a future big enough for everybody—particularly for you yourselves—will open up."

BRITISH JET AIRLINER MAKES LONDON-NEW YORK FLIGHT

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (UPI)—

Britain's Comet IV jet airliner flew from London to New York yesterday on a pre-inaugural flight that the British hoped would lead soon to regular passenger flights across the Atlantic.

The airliner, with 56 passengers and crew, made the 3,500-mile flight in eight hours, 54 minutes, not counting a stopover of more than an hour at Gander, Nfld. The average speed was a little less than 400 miles an hour. The plane bucked headwinds of 150 miles an hour during the flight.

British Overseas Airways Corp. has received landing permission from authorities in London, and is awaiting approval from the Port of New York Authority. It hopes to start service Oct. 17-18 days before Pan American World Airways is due to begin transatlantic service to Paris with the Boeing 707 jet liner.

REPORT IS FILED ON DIXON-YATES 'CONFLICT' CASE

Court Commissioner Assesses Claims, Does Not Rule on Contract's Validity.

By WILLIAM R. WYANT JR., A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—The United States Court of Claims had under advisement today a 183-page commissioner's report setting forth the facts in the controversial Dixon-Yates case but leaving the court to decide whether the power contract was invalid because of "conflict of interest."

The case involves a $3,534,778 claim brought by the Dixon-Yates syndicate in December 1955 to recover expenses allegedly spent or obligated in its contract with the Atomic Energy Commission to construct a power station at West Memphis, Ark.

Following extensive criticism by Democrats and proponents of the Tennessee Valley Authority, President Eisenhower ordered the contract canceled in July 1955. The Dixon-Yates group sued and the Government denied liability, asserting the contract was "unlawful."

The report by Commissioner Wilson Cowen assesses the validity of claims made by the Dixon-Yates group and relates in some detail the activities of Adolphe Wenzell, who was consultant to the Bureau of the Budget concerning the contract and also advised First Boston Corp., fiscal agent for Dixon-Yates.

Made Study of TVA. Wenzell, it was recalled by Cowen, worked for the Bureau of the Budget from May through September of 1953, at which time he made a study of TVA. He was permitted to keep a copy of the report on condition that it would not be shown to anyone else, but Wenzell showed the document to George D. Woods, board chairman of First Boston, the report said.

Early in 1954 the Bureau of the Budget recalled Wenzell because of his study of TVA. By that time, the Eisenhower Administration had decided to make a contract with private utilities companies to meet electric power needs of the Memphis area.

Cowen reported that Wenzell's second period with the Bureau ended April 3, 1954, and that in the period he made 11 trips from New York to Washington and return. Although the Government had agreed to pay Wenzell's expenses, most of his

Eisenhower Planning Vigorous Leadership Role in Campaign

No Limit on Time or Number of Speeches He Will Make This Month, Alcorn Says.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (AP)—

President Eisenhower apparently is going to take a bigger leadership role in the 1958 campaign than in any previous political campaign.

Republican National Chairman Meade Alcorn told reporters today no limit has been placed on the time or number of speeches the President will put into this year's electioneering. Asked whether the Chief Executive is putting more leadership into this campaign than into any other political effort, Alcorn replied: "I think that is a very fair conclusion."

Sor far Mr. Eisenhower's announced political activities will take him on a trip to Iowa, Colorado, California and Illinois from Oct. 17 to Oct. 22. In recent weeks, the Democrats have shifted four or five times, Alcorn said, on what they name as the principal issues. First, he said, it was defense, then jobs, then inflation and now he reads this morning it is Quemoy and Matsu.

If the Democrats want to go to the mat on the latter, the G.O.P. chairman said, "certainly we will meet them."

Claims, which will study the facts set forth and make whatever determination it sees fit.

Concerning damages, Cowen informed the court that seven concerns involved in the original Dixon-Yates petition had withdrawn claims totaling $1,468,352. The petition was brought by Mississippi Valley Generating Co., owned by Middle South Utilities, Inc., and the Southern Co.

Edgar H. Dixon was involved in the case as president of Southern and Eugene A. Yates as chairman of the board for Southern. Dixon became president of M.V.G. when it was organized to build the plant.

In Cowen's report, the Government's possible liability to four New York law firms involved in the Dixon-Yates case was put at about $430,000. This included firms and individual claims as follows:

Cahill, Gordon, Reindel & Ohl, $246,198; Withrop, Stinson, Putnam & Roberts, $108,128; Willkie, Owen, Farr, Gallagher & Walton, $75,787; and Milbank, Tweed, Hope & Hadley, $15,000.

Cowen reported that three eminent members of the New York Bar had testified as expert witnesses that the legal fees claimed by the four firms were fair and reasonable. He said the fees, on an hourly basis, averaged less than $40 an hour.

Court to Rule.

Cowen's report was submitted for the consideration of the five-member Court of

SECRECY LIFTED ON MOST PRE-'46 PENTAGON FILES

Millions of Outdated Documents Affected—Some Date Back to Word War I.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (AP)—

The Pentagon ordered declassification yesterday of almost all military documents stamped top secret, secret and confidential before Jan. 1, 1946. Some date back to World War I or before. Many millions of documents are affected.

The declassification order was signed by Secretary of Defense Neil McElroy last Saturday, it was learned, and was announced today.

The order takes a preliminary job also at the continuing accumulation of classified papers. It orders the automatic downgrading, after a period of years, of documents labeled top secret.

Left for future action is a time-phased schedule that will remove all grades of secrecy from documents after they have been stored for a given number of years.

War Plans Exempt.

Specifically exempted from the mass declassification order are papers detailing United States and Allied war plans and almost everything connected with intelligence and counter-intelligence.

Personnel and medical records also were excluded because their confidential nature is covered by numerous regulations, laws and customs that normally prevent the invasion of personal privacy.

No one knows how many papers have been tied up in security red tape. The estimates run into many hundreds of millions.

They include an estimated 1,376,653 cubic feet of papers stored in 127,466 steel cabinets in military records centers, holding areas and the national archives.

Many Other Documents.

These are the identifiable documents that the Pentagon can put its hands on. There are a lot more. The universities and some 23,000 industrial plants hold many still-classified papers from World War II.

Behind the directive lies 18 months of work by retired V. Adm. John M. Hoskins and his small staff, set up for the purpose by then Secretary of Defense Charles E. Wilson.

After sizing up the problem, Hoskins decided on a mass attack. He found that individual services and units had tried before to reduce the size and flow of classified material but that most of these efforts had ended in frustration because of the magnitude of the task.

FEDERAL AGENTS TRACE INTEREST OF GAMBLER IN GORMAN FIRM

Seek to Learn Whether "Buster" Wortman Associate Robert Phelps Actually Is Agent for Another.

Government investigators are seeking to determine whether gambler Robert Phelps, listed in company records as one of the incorporators of the Stephen Gorman Bricklaying Co., actually represented someone else, the Post-Dispatch was told today.

A determined effort to learn the identity of the interests Phelps may have represented failed to produce any conclusive evidence. Treasury agents have asked witnesses whether Phelps' one-third interest was held by him or either Frank (Buster) Wortman, East Side rackets boss, or Leo F. Havey, boss of the St. Louis Bricklayers Union.

Both Phelps and Wortman have refused to answer questions relating to possible financial interests in the Gorman company. Gorman resisted interrogation by a federal grand jury at East St. Louis and finally was directed by United States District Judge William G. Juergens to answer certain questions.

Havey, who has been investigated by federal authorities here, has denied having any interest in Gorman's firm. Rival subcontractors complain that the bricklayers' union assigns its most efficient workmen to jobs handled by Gorman and the Midwest Bricklayers Construction Co., Inc., a firm in which Havey's wife has an interest.

Phelps, a former employee of Wortman gambling casinos, was one of 12 Wortman associates found by Treasury agents on Gorman payroll. He collected $7347 from jobs in St. Louis and on the East Side.

Records show that Phelps' name appeared on the Gorman company's incorporation papers Nov. 26, 1946, as a holder of 250 shares of $100 par value stock. The other stockholders were Gorman and Havey. B. Deal, each holding 250 shares.

Prospered from Start. The Gorman Co., which has headquarters at 4200 Clayton avenue, prospered from the start. But records indicate Phelps sold his stock to Gorman after only two years, leaving only Gorman and Deal as stockholders. Deal sold out to Gorman in 1954.

The Internal Revenue Service has filed suit in United States Tax Court at Washington seeking to collect $63,148 from Gorman in additional taxes and income. The suit is based on Gorman's purchase of Deal's stock.

In its suit, the Government said Gorman paid $15,336 on a reported income of $33,349 in 1954. The suit contended he had an unreported income of $77,388 on which an additional $59,322 should have been paid.

The major issue is the payment by Gorman of $67,500 for Deal's interest. In an answer contesting the suit, Gorman contended that the sale was an "arm's length transaction" in which the firm paid the amount and placed the stock in the company's treasury.

The transaction was negotiated by Gorman's attorney, Daniel P. Reardon, the answer stated.

Gorman contended the stock was purchased for the benefit of the company and "in furtherance of legitimate corporate purposes." He denied that he received any income from the deal.

Affairs of the Gorman company, which have been drawn into a federal investigation of Wortman, were also aired last July by the Senate Labor Rackets Investigating Committee. Wortman, called as a witness, refused to answer questions about his possible association with the firm on ground that he might incriminate himself.

Robert F. Kennedy, chief counsel for the committee, charged that Wortman had "assisted" Gorman in getting almost a monopoly in public housing project work in the St. Louis area.

HIT AND KILLED BY TRUCK IN FRONT OF HIS OFFICE

Henry Ray, a sales engineer for Grinnell Company Inc. of 1615 South Kingshighway, was struck by a truck and killed today on a service drive in front of the firm's offices.

Charles Buchanan, operator of the truck, said he was driving away from a loading dock and did not know he had struck Ray. Ray apparently had just left his office and was walking to his automobile, police said. He was pronounced dead on arrival at Barnes Hospital.

He lived at 4344 Laclede avenue. Buchanan lives at 4124 Chouteau avenue.

OWNER ARRESTED IN GAMBLING RAID ON COUNTY HOME

St. Louis county police raided a home in Lemay today and arrested Anton Saake, former tavern operator, on suspicion of operating a handbook.

Armed with a search warrant, five officers walked into the basement of Saake's home at 412 Lemay Ferry road and found him taking telephone bets on horse races, they reported.

Betting tabs, football cards, sweepstakes tickets and $400 in cash were confiscated. Police reported they remained there for more than an hour, answering the telephone and taking bets ranging as high as $150.

Information developed by Patrolman Donald Barth and Sgt. William Owens led to the raid. Barth reported overhearing telephone callers place bets with Saake.

BIG-STORE SALES IN DOLLARS DOWN 1 PCT. FOR WEEK

Dollar volume of department store sales in the St. Louis area for the week ended last Saturday was 1 per cent below the level for the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis reported today.

The decline in the St. Louis area was the same as that in the entire Eighth Federal Reserve District for the week.

Cumulative sales in the district for the period Jan. 1 through Sept. 27 continued to lag 2 per cent below the 1957 level, the bank said.

Department store sales across the nation last week were 2 per cent lower than sales in the corresponding week last year, the Federal Reserve Board in Washington reported.

3410 JOBLESS CLAIMS FILED IN WEEK, A DROP OF 347

A total of 3410 initial claims for unemployment insurance were filed this week with the Missouri Division of Employment security, Charles G. DeLarky, St. Louis office manager, announced today. This was a decline of 347 claims from the number filed last week.

There also was a sharp reduction in continuing claims due to resumption of work in the automobile industry. A total of 14,665 continuing claims were processed this week, compared with 18,848 last week.

MISSISSIPPI VALLEY STOCK YARDS STRIKE HALTS SALE

Sale of cattle, hogs and sheep was halted today at Mississippi Valley Stock Yards, 61 Angelica street, when workers who count, weigh and feed the livestock went on strike.

They are members of Local 545, Butchers, Sausage Workers & Packing House Employees union, John Stadelman, secretary-treasurer of the local, said there are 23 members of the union employed there, and that they have been negotiating for a new contract to replace one which has expired.

William Green, company spokesman, said the workers walked off their jobs at 8 a.m. The yards were filled with livestock, with an added number there for a sale scheduled for 10:30 a.m., Green said.

PART OF LACKLAND ROAD TO BE CLOSED FOR 2 WEEKS

A section of Lackland road from Schuetz road to Lindbergh boulevard will be closed Monday to permit replacement of a narrow wooden bridge over Fee Fee creek, about one-third mile east of Schuetz, John J. Leslie, county highway engineer, announced today.

Leslie said the one and one-third miles section of Lackland will be closed for about two weeks. The new bridge will be a pre-cast, pre-stressed concrete structure.

It will widen the roadway from 16 feet to 24 feet and will provide an asphaltic concrete surface.

PLAZA HOUSING FINANCING NOW IN FINAL STAGE

FNMA to Purchase $2,505,600 Mortgage on First of Six Apartment Buildings.

Arrangements for financing the Plaza housing project entered the final stage today after the Federal National Mortgage Association arranged to purchase a $2,505,600 mortgage on the first of six apartment buildings to be erected by the Urban Redevelopment Corp. of St. Louis.

The mortgage is to bear 4 1/4 per cent interest and to be paid off in 39 years and three months.

The next step is to complete legal documents required for FHA insurance on a construction loan. This will clear the way for a start on construction.

A group of five banks has arranged to finance construction by providing $14,000,000 in short-term loans. The lending agencies are:

Manufacturers Trust of New York, $6,000,000; Mercantile Trust Co., $3,850,000; First National Bank in St. Louis, $2,350,000; Boatmen's National Bank, $650,000; Bank of St. Louis, $550,000.

The first Plaza building, which will contain 208 apartments, is to be erected on the west side of Fifteenth street between Pine and Chestnut.

The Urban Redevelopment Corp. hopes to start construction soon.

The corporation, organized by a group of civic and business leaders to combat blight in the heart of the city, will put up 1090 apartments for middle-income tenants. It has arranged to pay $920,000 for the site, five and one-half blocks bought up and cleared by the city's Land Clearance for Redevelopment Authority.

TELEPHONE CO. REINSTATES 14 SUSPENDED WORKERS

Fourteen telephone installation employees of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. were reinstated by the firm yesterday following their suspension Wednesday.

They had refused to work overtime when requested, a spokesman for the firm said. "The men were protesting the actions of a supervisor and they had good personal reasons for not working," Frank P. Loneragan, assistant director of District Six of the Communications Workers of America, said.

It has been company policy that an employee will not be required to work overtime if there are personal reasons, he stated. The men are members of Local 6320 of the CWA.

MAN WHO WAS HIT BY AUTO AT BROADWAY, NAGEL DIES

John C. Messmer, 70 years old, died at City Hospital last night of injuries suffered Sept. 22 when he was struck by an automobile as he was walking across South Broadway at Nagel avenue.

The driver, Lloyd Harter, vice president of Harbord Fabrics Inc., told police he was driving east in Nagel and was making a left turn when Messmer suddenly walked in front of his car. Messmer suffered a broken hip and other fractures.

CLIFFORD JONES URGES BI-STATE ACTION AT ONCE

Legislator Believes Compromise Must Be Found to Make Agency Effective.

The Missouri and Illinois Legislatures must find "an area of compromise" to wipe out legislative differences that are hobbling the Missouri-Illinois Bi-State Development Agency, State Representative A. Clifford Jones of Clayton said today.

"Work has to be done right now so that identical enabling legislation can be adopted by both legislatures," he asserted. The Missouri Legislature last April threw the Missouri law out of conformity with the Illinois act, thereby restricting the agency's effectiveness.

Jones' remarks were made at a hearing conducted at the county courthouse in Clayton by an interim committee on local government of the Missouri Legislature. Jones also discussed legislation that was recommended recently by a committee of which he was a member. The committee proposed a number of broad changes affecting the powers of the government of St. Louis county and communities in the county.

Only Personal Views. Emphasizing that his remarks concerning the Bi-State Agency reflected only his personal views, Jones said he felt representatives of the Missouri and Illinois Legislatures and the agency should meet quickly to seek agreement on legislation mutually acceptable to all parties concerned.

Jones, Republican candidate for election as supervisor of St. Louis county in the general election next month, declared: "The Bi-State Agency is tremendously important to the county as well as to the City of St. Louis."

He pointed out that the action of the Missouri Legislature in refusing to adopt a "secondary compact" identical with one adopted by Illinois in 1953 prevented the agency from proceeding with plans for development of an industrial park at Columbia Bottoms.

Turning to other matters on which he said the county needs state enabling legislation, Jones recommended authority be given to the county to submit to voters a proposal for adoption of the Missouri non-partisan court plan. Candidates for the circuit court and probate court benches in the county now seek election as candidates of political parties.

He also called for "authorization to allow us to limit the number of magistrates we have. If we don't set a limit, we will eventually be in the same situation as St. Louis, where there are 10 magistrates with nothing to do."

Comment on Survey. He said he wanted to call to the committee's attention recommendations contained in the recent report of the Metropolitan St. Louis Survey concerning organization and financing of school districts in the county.

"This is outside the province of the county government," he noted, "but I think the committee should be aware of these recommendations because the county school board may submit some proposals. It." He called the Survey's proposal for a uniform basic rate in all county school districts "a good one," pointing out that supplementary rates could be levied by individual districts.

In discussing recommendations made by the Committee on Municipalities and Services in St. Louis county, of which he was secretary, Jones stressed matters that would require enactment of enabling state legislation.

Among these were proposals that the county be authorized to make tax refunds to communities meeting minimum standards of police protection; communities be required to notify the county Planning Commission of changes in its zoning or municipal planning.

Other proposals would provide county, and authority to regulate traffic on "through highways" within municipalities; clarification of the county's authority to make electrical inspections in municipalities contracting for such service, and greater authority for the County Council in submitting to voters proposals for consolidation or establishment of municipalities and fire districts.

$122,000 Fund to Be Requested For Neighborhood Rehabilitation

Mayor Says Aldermen Will Be Asked to Make First Appropriation From 1955 Bond Funds.

A bill to appropriate $122,000 from 1955 bond issue funds for neighborhood rehabilitation work will be introduced in the Board of Aldermen when it reconvenes next Friday, the Mayor's office announced today.

The proposed appropriation will be the first from the $4,000,000 provided for neighborhood rehabilitation in the $110,000,000 public improvement program authorized three years ago.

The improvement program outlined by the Citizens Bond Issue Supervisory Committee contemplated spending about $250,000 for neighborhood improvement work this year. Only $122,000 is being asked for at this time.

The requested appropriation will be spent for completing work in the West End rehabilitation area and for work in the Compton-Eads and Fountain Park areas of the city.

Inspection work, preliminary to actual rehabilitation activity, has been under way in the West End area for more than a year. About a fourth of the 7000 dwelling units in the area, bounded by Union, Hodiamont and Page avenues and Delmar boulevard, have been studied.

The Compton-Eads area is bounded by Jefferson avenue, Grand boulevard, Park avenue and Russell boulevard. It contains 4100 dwelling units. The Fountain Park area, with 3500 dwelling units, is bounded by Kingshighway and Delmar boulevard, Newstead and Easton avenues.

The rehabilitation work consists of detailed inspections to insure conformity with sanitation, zoning and housing ordinances and encouraging property owners to make improvements to stop the spread of blight in the neighborhoods.

The city, in turn, helps make the neighborhoods more attractive by repairing streets and alleys and by the installation of additional park, playground and other recreational facilities, where the need is indicated.

TAVERN IN WHICH TWO WERE KILLED BECOMES CHURCH

The Melody Inn at 714 McCambridge avenue, East Madison, Ill., where two murders have occurred in the last six years, will become the scene of religious services Sunday. Members of the Temple Baptist Church begin worshipping there today.

Formerly known as the Hi-Ho Club, the tavern has been closed since June 3, when John S. Cavanaugh, a 22-year-old St. Louis machine operator, was shot to death there. Jack Kelly, hoodlum operator of the night spot, was murdered there in 1952.

The 88 members of the church have leased the building for six months, with an option to buy. They have been holding services in the homes of members. The Rev. Paul Washburn, formerly pastor of the First Baptist Church in Madison, is pastor.

The dance floor of the tavern will be used as the church auditorium. Sunday school will convene in a room used for gambling in the past.

ESCAPING SUSPECT SHOT BY POLICEMAN

Fled as Officers Sought to Question Him—Two Companions Held.

Simmie Graves, a laborer living in the 2300 block of Rutger street, was shot in the left shoulder early today as he ran from a policeman in an alley off Ranken avenue near Laclede avenue.

The policeman, Patrolman Harrison Williams, and his cruising-car companion, Patrolman Julian Boyd, had sought to question Graves and two others when they were found driving the wrong way in Lawton boulevard shortly after 2:30 a.m.

The car was going west, and Lawton traffic is eastbound only at that time. On seeing the police car, Graves sped up and the officers gave chase.

At the alley off Ranken, the fugitive machine crashed into a block of concrete, and Graves ran into an areaway. Williams caught him and they grappled. Graves broke away, and the officer shot him with his service revolver, the policeman said.

Patrolman Boyd had arrested the others. They gave their names as Claude Felton, of the 1200 block of Missouri avenue, and Sam Townsend, 1300 block of Armstrong avenue.

The car fitted the description of one stolen last night in the 2300 block of Papin street.

OVERLAND JUDGE IS FOUND SHOT; CONDITION SERIOUS

Overland Police Judge Harry R. Turner was reported in serious condition at St. Louis County Hospital today after he was found shot in the head last night at his home, 9208 Wabady avenue, Overland.

Mrs. Turner told police her husband called to her from a basement office in their home and a short time later, she heard a shot. She ran to a neighbor's home, and returned to find him in the office, with a revolver between his feet.

Physicians said Turner suffered a fractured skull, but the bullet did not penetrate his head. His wife said he had been under the care of a physician for about a year, and had been despondent about his health recently.

RUSSIAN ROULETTE FATAL

Albert Taylor, 16 North Garrison avenue, shot and killed himself in the presence of three friends last night as they were drinking in the kitchen of his home, police reported.

Police were told that Taylor, a 25-year-old laborer, suggested a round of Russian roulette and placed two cartridges in a revolver. He snapped it twice at one of the others without result, and the third time put a bullet into his own head.

GONTER DESIGNS AS TRAFFIC CHIEF

Traffic Commissioner Charles G. Gonter of St. Louis, who has been on leave of absence for the last six months, resigned today. The resignation is to become effective tomorrow.

Gonter, 47 years old, has been traffic commissioner since 1949, when he was brought to St. Louis from Pittsburgh by the late Mayor Joseph M. Darc. He had been employed in the traffic division here from 1930 to 1939 and was Pittsburgh traffic commissioner at the time of his return.

Mayor Darc asked Gonter to straighten out the downtown traffic situation. The post-war increase in motor vehicles was threatening a breakdown in transportation, particularly at peak hours.

Gonter obtained co-operation of local and over-the-road truckers. They agreed to keep their trucks off downtown streets in mid-morning and late-afternoon hours. Gonter also directed the marking of lanes in downtown streets, installed an extensive signal system and contributed to the success of the city's master traffic plan.

Gonter took the leave of absence because of illness. He said he has recovered, but felt he should retire. He plans to travel extensively.

His job is being filled temporarily by Ellis Henry Jr., but a civil service examination must be held to fill the vacancy.

Gonter holds a degree in electrical engineering from Washington University and a bachelor of law degree from Duquesne University, Pittsburgh. He lives at 4722 Pennsylvania avenue.

His annual salary was $9664.

Roadside Criticism.
MOSCOW, Oct. 3 (AP)—The deputy chief of Ukraine's heavy industry board yesterday lashed at technical and political neglect. He said it has brought a dangerous slump in Donbas coal production. The official, B. Mayboroda, said one reason for the slump is that executives of the coal syndicates seldom visit the mines and don't know how work is going on.

to Hunt, naming a Springfield woman, "who sent me."

"I then went behind the cigar counter through a door, then down a long corridor to a door with a buzzer," Turner related. "The buzzer to this buzzer was controlled by Hunt behind the cigar counter."

Further Description.

"After entering this door you continue down the hall to the stairs that wind up to the right to a steel door which was opened. The stairs turn toward the street and at the top of the stairs you open a door into the gambling room, which has a small bar at the left."

"I met Vern Wilder in the dice room just off the big room on my second visit. On this occasion I did not meet Hunt until I got in the gambling room. On the first visit I played a dice game and my wife was with me all the time. I lost $40. I could recognize the dealer but did not get his name."

"On my visit on or about Dec. 1 or 2, I was accompanied by Roy Maples. I told the man behind the counter I had been there before, introducing Maples. We followed the same route to get to the dice room."

"Shortly after we entered the dice room Harry Hunt introduced us to Vern Wilder, who said 'I remember you were here once before with your wife.'"

"Lost Several Hundred."

"On this occasion I lost several hundred dollars, leaving the gambling joint between 1 and 2 a.m. Maples and I then went to Tulsa, Okla., returning to Joplin the following day. It was on this occasion that I lost more money and gave Harry Hunt a check for $200 drawn on the First National Bank of Anchorage, Alaska, and Hunt gave me $200 for which I was to give him a check later."

Turner continued that a few days later, Hunt and another man called on him at Springfield. Turner said he submitted a policeman friend to see if he could get a fair shake. "I left at 11 a.m. and did not get a fair shake," Hunt said. "If you feel that way about it, destroy the check. I tore the check up in the presence of Hunt and the fellow with him."

The policeman, John Mercer of the Springfield department, in a statement confirmed that he was present and saw Turner tear up the check.

Mercer quoted Hunt as saying, "Mr. Wilder has been running this place for several years and has had no trouble." Mercer continued, "George (Turner) asked Hunt how he got by without being closed up. Hunt said, 'They know we are operating, but as long as they get their pay they don't care.'"

Auto Strike

12 hours after G.M. workers walked off the job.

Chrysler, the other member of the automotive Big Three, settled with the union Wednesday without a strike. It was the first time since 1941 that Chrysler and the UAW had reached agreement without the union applying pressure by a strike or a strike deadline.

However, Chrysler and UAW negotiators met again today in an effort to reach a contract for 19,000 salaried employees and skilled tradesmen not covered in Wednesday's agreement.

(Chrysler was still beset with strike difficulties, U.P.I. said. In the Detroit area today, 7,100 hourly workers were on strike from four plants because of local disputes, mostly surrounding production standards. Another 3,200 were out at the Kokomo (Ind.) transmission plant and the Plymouth-Dodge assembly plant at Newark, Del. Some 21,000 salaried, "white collar" workers walked out of five plants in Detroit in protest against their exclusion from the Chrysler contract agreement.)

The G.M.-UAW agreement was signed last night after 36 hours of almost continuous bargaining. It followed the pattern of the Ford-Chrysler pact with the UAW. The three-year contract, replacing the agreement that ran out May 29, provides that G.M. workers will get between 24 and 30 cents hourly increase over the life of the contract.

Fringe Benefits. G.M. followed Ford and Chrysler in giving the UAW concessions including continuation of pay boosts if the cost of living continues to increase, an increase in supplemental unemployment pay and a severance pay plan to take care of workers who lose their jobs when plants are closed or moved.

G.M. had insisted right up to the time of the strike that it would not give the UAW any concessions above those on which the union agreed with Ford and Chrysler.

But in the settlement, Reuther obtained these additional gains at the G.M. bargaining table:

1. An end to the seven and a half hour work day for some G.M. employees. Reuther said both Ford and Chrysler abolished the short work day in the last two years and he got G.M. to do the same.
2. A five-cent an hour premium pay base for workers scheduled to work seven consecutive days. The work previously had been done at straight time pay.
3. A G.M. agreement to study what the UAW had called wage inequities, under which G.M. plants in the same geographical area paid different wage scales for the same type of work. Reuther said this was a problem peculiar to G.M., as its wage scales varied in its 126 plants while Ford and Chrysler pay was much the same in their plants across the nation.

Highest Industry Wage. G.M.'s average hourly wage is the highest in the industry—$2.62 as compared with $2.52 at Ford and $2.33 at Chrysler. The latter company said its wage scale is lower because it does not have as many skilled labor classifications as the other two firms.

Reuther dispatched orders to G.M. locals within an hour after the strike settlement telling them to speed up negotiations on local issues and get back to work as soon as possible. The settlement came at 9:45 p.m. (St. Louis time) at G.M.'s big Detroit headquarters.

From across the nation, G.M. locals sent messages praising the national G.M. contract but emphasizing that they would stay on the picket line until local problems are settled.

Buder Estate

approximate with any substantial degree of accuracy, the status, condition or value of the estate.

Doubtful Assets. Continuing, the executor stated:

"Several potential assets and liabilities are so highly contingent and so thoroughly impregnated with doubt and uncertainty that the valuation or appraisal thereof is completely speculative and conjectural."

"In fairness and justice to the parties, this case should not proceed to trial but should be placed on the 'reserve calendar' until the inherent uncertainties herein mentioned are resolved at a later date."

The following amounts were listed by the Government above what the estate tax return showed for these categories in evaluating the estate: Stocks and bonds—$1,233,202; real estate residence at 3137 Longfellow boulevard—$18,000; insurance—$25,159; jointly owned property—$10,746; other miscellaneous property—$1,918,180; transfers—$1,158,942; debts—$1,872,379; mortgages and liens—$321,598; charitable bequests—$50,000.

The Government also allowed the following deductions, totaling $36,665, from the net estate: Debts—$30,190; joint property—$6183; stocks and bonds—$291.

Family-Owned Firm.

All shares of stock in Pontiac Realty Co. were held by the late Mr. Buder and members of his family and, for more than 40 years preceding his death, no stock had been sold, the petition stated. The attorney was president of the closely-held firm.

In the tax return, the estate's 950 shares of common stock in Pontiac were valued at $166,250 and the 750 shares of preferred at $150,000.

However, the Government placed a value of $939,493 on the common and $237,000 on the preferred, raising the amount shown in the return by $863,243.

The notice of deficiency also charges the estate with Pontiac stock valued at $1,158,942, stating that these were shares of common and preferred transferred to G. A. Buder Jr. by the decedent in contemplation of death. The estate tax return does not list these shares.

The executor, in his petition, contends the Government has given excessive values to the Pontiac stock, pointing out that it has no known market value.

It was also asserted that, from 1914 to 1951, the Pontiac Realty Co. and Gustavus A. Buder had "on numerous occasions engaged in business transactions and had accommodated each other with loans and advances."

As a result, the balance due Pontiac "on this mutual running account" was $701,240 at the time of Buder's death, and this claim is pending, the petition said.

The Government also seeks to include in the estate tax return a valuation of $889,458, representing the late Mr. Buder's one-half interest in the law firm of Buder & Buder. This would also include the Acreage Realty Co., a corporation owned by the firm.

In resisting this claim, the petition said the Commissioner of Internal Revenue "arbitrarily took the maximum value for alleged assets" of the firm. It was also pointed out that Oscar Buder, who had been a partner with Gustavus A. Buder from 1908 to 1946, had filed suit in circuit court for a dissolution and accounting of the firm, and the suit is pending.

The Government has made no allowance for deductions if there is any liability to the estate as a result of a judgment in this case, the petition stated.

The charitable bequests which the Government seeks to disallow include $5000 each to Susan R. Buder School, Susan R. Buder Branch of the St. Louis Public Library, St. Louis University, Washington University, St. Louis Law Library Association, St. Louis Police Relief Association, St. Louis Firmen's Retirement System, Teachers Benevolent Association and Municipal Theatre Association.

"The only reason none of these legacies has been paid is that the pendency of litigation elsewhere mentioned has made it impossible for petitioner to obtain an order for distribution," the executor said.

The Government is also asking to collect alleged tax deficiencies and penalties totaling $1,227,380 from Adolph C. (Andy) Burger, his wife, daughter and two of his companies. The claims cover various periods from 1946 through 1950. Burger was convicted and sentenced to four years in prison earlier this year for evading taxes on profits made on over-allowing sales of cars during the post-war shortage.

Meanwhile, the Government announced the Tax Court would convene here Dec. 1 to hear a docket of 35 cases involving alleged deficiency tax claims and penalties totaling $9,508,087.

One of these is a claim of $1,636,435 against Fred M. Salgh and his associates in the purchase and sale of the Railway Exchange building, covering the year 1946, the claim is based upon the use of available earnings of the building to purchase its shares. The Government contends these earnings should be treated as dividends to Salgh and his associates.

Another large claim is one for $2,580,812 against Delta Air Lines Inc. and Chicago & Southern Air Lines Inc., growing out of the merger of the two concerns several years ago.

Evan Dale, Southern Illinois labor leader convicted of income tax evasion, is fighting a claim of $191,809 in taxes and penalties for the period 1947 through 1952.

Also on the docket is a claim of $13,046 against Roy T. Graham, bondsman and former St. Louis county tavern operator. The claim follows disallowance of deductions claimed by Graham for commissions he paid to obtain certain bonding business. It also includes certain court costs and legal expenses.

Charles D. Long, an attorney here, is resisting a claim of $988 arising out of the disallowance of deductions for expenses in his successful campaign for election to the board of governors of the Missouri Athletic Club and for certain dues paid to the M.A.C. and another club.

Nineteen claims are against individuals and Longstreet, Abbott & Co. of Clayton, totaling $982,465 growing out of certain commodity trading. The Government contends the taxpayers paid taxes and operated as a series of partnerships when they should have paid taxes as a corporation.

Other claims are against Julius H. Kennedy, his wife, and Jack Kennedy Inc., $474,188; Michael Ryan, his wife and two construction firms he operates in Evansville, Ind., $470,013; Hastings P. (Red) Cox, former St. Louis gambler, $44,000, and Noel Smith and his wife, LaGrange, Mo., $542,000.

WHITESIDE ENTERS PLEA OF NOT GUILTY IN FCC CASE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (UP)—Lawyer Thurman A. Whiteside pleaded not guilty today to charges he conspired with former Federal Communications Commission Commissioner Richard A. Mack to influence the FCC word of mouth, the Globe said.

The newspaper said these events took place: After Dulles spoke for about 15 minutes, the educators questioned him for three-quarters of an hour. Their questions implied strong disagreement.

Dulles Softened Far East Stand After Secret Harvard Conference

BOSTON, Oct. 3 (AP)—A secret conference of Secretary of State John Foster Dulles with a group of Harvard faculty members last Saturday may have had something to do with a seeming change in United States policy regarding Quoniam, the Boston Globe said today.

On that day Dulles came to Boston to address the Atlantic Treaty Association. The prepared address he brought with him and handed out on arrival said the United States Formosa Strait policy was vital to Europe. Then he was whisked across the Charles river to Cambridge and met with some 30 Harvard faculty members.

Crimson Didn't Print It. The meeting was supposed to be secret but a story was written—although not printed—for the Harvard Crimson, undergraduate daily. Since then the story has spread by word of mouth, the Globe said.

The story is that the conference was interrupted several times by telephone calls from Dulles and even President Eisenhower.

McCloy's New York office said he was out of town and not immediately available to report for comment on the report.

At any rate, the Globe says, on Tuesday Dulles told a Washington news conference the United States favored reducing Chiang's forces on Quoniam and Matsua if the Communists ceased fire. On Wednesday the President backed up Dulles saying a cease-fire would open the way for negotiations in good faith.

JET FIGHTER PLANE RECORD

LONDON, Oct. 3 (AP)—A British Hawker Hunter jet yesterday set a new long distance record for fighter planes by flying 1830 miles nonstop from Dunfold, England, to Tobruk, Libya, the plane's makers claimed.

The Hunter—standard front-line fighter of the British Royal Air Force—covered the distance in 3 hours 25 minutes, bettering by 387 miles the old record set by a French Mistral in March 1955.

TWA MAY BEGIN ST. LOUIS-MIAMI SERVICE NOV. 29

By WILLIAM K. WYANT JR.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 — Trans World Airlines may begin providing new service between St. Louis and Florida Nov. 29 under terms of a formal order issued yesterday by the Civil Aeronautics Board. Award of the route was announced last March.

The St. Louis to Florida route for TWA will be competitive with service now provided by Eastern Air Lines. It was granted by a three to two vote.

The award will permit TWA to serve Nashville, Atlanta, and the Tampa-St. Petersburg-Clearwater area between the terminal points of St. Louis and Miami. In addition, it will permit TWA to provide single-plane service from Florida to Kansas City and Los Angeles, provided such flights stop at St. Louis.

Extension for Delta.
Delta was granted authority in yesterday's formal CAB announcement to extend service from Birmingham to Memphis. This will permit service by Delta from Kansas City, St. Louis or Memphis to Birmingham, Atlanta and other cities in South Carolina and Georgia.

Eastern Air Lines received permission to close a gap in its present system between Chattanooga and Birmingham. This is in addition to service now provided by Capital Airlines.

The award to TWA had the approval of CAB Chairman James R. Duffee, and members Harman D. Denny and Louis J. Hector. Their written opinion said it was clear that a competitive St. Louis-Miami service was required by "public convenience and necessity."

Traffic surveys were cited to show that in 1957 the St. Louis-Miami-Tampa-St. Petersburg market totaled 45,513 passengers and more than $6,000,000 revenue passenger miles. Total air traffic for the St. Louis-Southeast markets served exclusively by Eastern was put at more than 153,000 passengers and $7,000,000 revenue passenger miles.

Underdeveloped Market.
"The need for competitive service does not rest on the size of the present and future traffic alone," the CAB opinion said. "We are convinced, as was the examiner, that the St. Louis-Southeast market is substantially underdeveloped."

"There is considerable evidence in the record to show that the service provided by Eastern is not comparable with that offered in competitive markets and that the growth of air traffic in this area has not closely approached potential levels."

The CAB said that despite the fact that Florida is to a great extent a tourist market, and that a major part of this kind of travel is generated by lower fare coach service, Eastern has offered "virtually no conveniently timed or attractive coach service between St. Louis and Florida."

Trans World Airlines, the opinion said, was chosen because it can be expected to provide greater public benefits than other applicants. The CAB pointed out that the TWA award will provide for the first time a desirable, single-carrier, single-plane service between Los Angeles, San Francisco and Kansas City and important cities in the Southeast.

Defends Eastern.

In a dissent, Vice Chairman Chan Gurney said he agreed "wholeheartedly" with the view that existing and potential traffic from St. Louis to the Southeast was not enough to support an additional carrier. He said Eastern's service had kept pace with increasing demands of the market since 1947.

"I am considerably concerned for the financial well-being of both TWA and Eastern on this route," he said.

The other dissenter, G. Joseph Minetti, said he considered it unsound to grant "the first and much coveted" single-plane, one-stop, West Coast to Florida authority as a by-product of the relatively limited St. Louis-Florida case.

AWAITS REMOVAL OF NEEDLE LEFT IN 1946 SURGERY

Scott Air Force Base surgeons will attempt next week to remove a C-shaped surgical needle from the abdominal wall of Mrs. Olivette Schutt, Lebanon, Ill.

Mrs. Schutt, now in the base hospital awaiting the operation, said the needle must have been overlooked when she underwent surgery there 12 years ago. Records pertaining to an operation on Mrs. Schutt in 1946 are not available, medical officers said.

The needle was discovered by a private physician last month during a physical examination in which X-rays were made. The base hospital surgeons at first said they could not operate on Mrs. Schutt, because she is no longer connected with the military service. She was married to an Air Force major, from whom she is now divorced, in 1946.

United States Representative

Melvin Price (Dem.) East St. Louis, was informed of Mrs. Schutt's dilemma and obtained permission from the Air Force Surgeon General in Washington for the Scott base hospital to admit her.

THREE INJURED WHEN CAR CRASHES INTO COUNTY DITCH

Three persons were injured, one seriously, when an automobile in which they were riding left the pavement and crashed into a ditch on Lemay

Ferry road, one mile south of Lindbergh boulevard, St. Louis county, last night.

The accident occurred on a hillside curve where there have been several traffic fatalities.

Injured were Charles E. Street, 76 years old, 2710 Russell boulevard, who was treated for scalp and hand injuries at County Hospital; and Mrs. John W. Wallace, 1100 block of Hickory street, and Donald E. Pedigo, Paris, Ill., who were treated for minor injuries and released.

MEN get rid of GRAY HAIR HANDICAPS LOOK ENERGETIC FULL OF VITALITY

This Simple, Easy Hair Tonic Way

Gray hair tells everyone that you are getting old. It handicaps you in both business and social success. Thousands of business men have sold and used millions of bottles of Head's Hair Color Preparation, the Fabulous Barber's Formula for coloring gray hair, with perfect results. It is the original hair tonic way that gives natural looking color and life to gray hair. It does it so quickly and so easily that your friends may comment upon how much better and younger you look without realizing you have done nothing to your hair. Head's is not a messy dye that is hard to use. Instead it is a clean, safe liquid that you rub through your hair and scalp each morning for a few days, like a hair tonic. Then use it twice a week to keep your hair looking vital, virile and youthful. Head's is the world's simplest and easiest way to impart natural looking youthful color to gray hair. Buy Head's at Barber Shops or Drug Stores or read the for 2 week treatments to Fred Davis, Box 42, Madrid, Iowa, Dept. 44.

ADLA STEVENSON
CHIDES NIXON FOR CHANGE OF HEART

By LAWRENCE E. DAVIES
New York Times News Service
OAKLAND, Calif., Oct. 3—Adlai E. Stevenson from the opposite side of a wall in the Oakland auditorium last night, chided Vice President Richard M. Nixon for an asserted change of heart since 1952 over the weight of mail as a guide to public policy.

The 1956 Democratic presidential nominee, in a speech to a party rally, referred to Nixon's charge of "sabotage" the other day against a State Department employee.

Nixon had expressed indignation over disclosure that four out of five letters to the State Department criticized the Administration's position on Quemoy.

"The Vice President's righteous assertion that foreign policy should depend on the weight of the evidence, not the weight of the mail, reminded me of something else," Stevenson asserted.

"Checkers' Speech." "Do you remember that back in 1952 he made another speech—the 'Checkers' speech? He was more concerned about the weight of the mail than the weight of the evidence, for that night he called on everyone to wire or write the Republican National Committee whether he should stay on the ticket with Gen. Eisenhower."

That was Nixon's television address following disclosure of the existence of a special fund placed at his disposal while he was in the Senate.

Stevenson called attention to the fact that he was speaking under the same roof with the Vice President at last night's rally.

"I don't know which Nixon it is—the new or the old," he said. "But I understand he has come out to campaign here for the incumbent Senator (William F. Knowland, Republican). I have some news for Nixon—it won't do any good—because (Edmund G.) Pat Brown (Democratic nominee) is going to be the next Governor of California and Clair Engle (Democratic nominee) is going to be the next Senator."

Stevenson said he was told that only a firewall separated last night's Democratic and Republican rallies.

"Right to Work." "Or," he asked, "is it to separate the President in Washington who is against 'right to work' from the President here in California who takes the position that he has no position. Or is it to separate the Vice President in Washington, who approves of the union shop, from the Vice President in California, whose position is no position, or is it just to separate Knowland from (Governor Goodwin J.) Knight, (Republican nominee for Senator)?"

The Democratic rally took place in the same building as a Republican dinner for which those attending paid $100 each to hear Vice President Richard M. Nixon.

At one end of the block-long Civic Auditorium is an arena, in which the Republicans dined. At the other is a theater seating about 2000, in which the Democrats gathered for the Stevenson meeting. They paid for seats in a price range of $5, $3 and $1.

In advance of the rally Democrats paid $25 apiece to mingle with Stevenson at a cocktail party at the home of Lee Friedrich, a congressional district party co-chairman in Oakland.

Roger Kent, vice chairman of the Democratic State Central Committee, said he had agreed that all proceeds from both the reception and the rally should be used for the campaigns of Democrats for the Legislature and Congress in Alameda county.

NORWOOD MANOR SEWER COSTS CUT BY M.S.D.

A fund of $100,000 was appropriated yesterday by the Metropolitan St. Louis Sewer District to reduce assessments that will be levied to pay for a recently completed storm-water sewer project in Normandy.

A group of residents who will be assessed for the project announced plans last month to fight the district over the greater-than-anticipated cost of the sewer in the Norwood Manor subdivision. The cost was $113,807, as compared with an advance estimate by the district of $65,000.

The money appropriated yesterday will be used to purchase tax bills that will be issued against property benefited by the sewer. William Q. Gehr, executive director of the district, estimated the procedure should reduce assessments against each of 233 property owners between 10 and 12 per cent.

The district will purchase the bills from the firm that constructed the project. This will eliminate a fee expected to amount to more than 10 per cent that would have been charged if the bills were purchased and held for collection by a lending agency. The district plan should reduce the total cost of the project to about $100,000, Gehr estimated.

This is the first time the district has acted to purchase special tax bills it issues.

Gehr has said previously that the higher than anticipated cost of the job resulted from an underestimate by the district, and unexpected construction difficulties.

The trustees authorized Gehr to execute a contract under which the district will pay the St. Louis County Health Department $8000 for health and sanitation inspection services in the year begun last July 1. The services, performed in the county portion of the sewer district, have been provided without payment in the past. However, the Health Department, in seeking payment, pointed out the services were expensive. It was furnishing them at the request of the district, and the district had some responsibility for the cost. Most of the inspections concern installations of septic tanks.

The board approved extension of the boundaries of the district to include two small areas in the proposed Pattonville sanitary sewer subdistrict. One of the two sections comprises 23 homes on Francis lane and St. Francis court west of Adie road. The other consists of eight homes on Midview avenue north of Prospect drive.

Residents of both areas requested inclusion in the district, Kehr stated.

A proposal for enclosing an open drainage ditch in the San Fernando Hills subdivision of Florissant was endorsed by two residents of the area who appeared before the board.

Richard H. Linneman, 6 St. Cornelius court, and Mrs. Thomas Nicastor, 5 St. Cornelius, said erosion of the ditch has damaged adjacent property and created a hazardous condition. At two previous hearings conducted by the district, opposition was expressed to the project, expected to cost $155,000.

from the Moslem and Armenian suburb of Dora.

The mob, led by stick-swinging women, heaped burning rubble astride the main road leading into Beirut from the north in an attempt to cut off traffic into the capital and enforce a general strike.

The mobs clogged the highway with heaps of smoldering truck tires. They hurled rocks, street signs and flaming tree branches onto the burning barricades.

Other demonstrators armed with riding whips and sticks roamed the streets and stopped cars which tried to crash the barricades.

Troops rushed to the scene in trucks. The soldiers tried to push the mobs back onto the sidewalks. But the demonstrators fought back with sticks and clubs.

The troops then opened fire with pistols and automatic weapons, wounding seven.

Charges of Partiality.
C New York Times News Service

Prior to the outbreak of violence, Karami had made a clean sweep of Lebanon's security chiefs and had unified security forces under the single command of a veteran army colonel and three other army officers under him.

This move had resulted in charges of partiality by Chamoun's supporters.

At the same time Karami reinstated government broadcasting personnel who had deserted to work for clandestine stations operated by the opposition during the rebellion that lasted from May 9 until President Chehab took office on Sept. 23. Karami is also minister of information.

While the new government was applying the spoils system in these fields, American Ambassador Robert M. McClintock was being criticized by Lebanese for his efforts to act as peacemaker in the crisis.

The Lebanese felt that McClintock's action was direct interference in Lebanon's affairs. McClintock assembled Lebanese leaders of all groups at his home Tuesday night to discuss settlement of their differences and to present his suggestion for a compromise.

30-DAY WORKHOUSE TERM FOR DRIVING WHEN DRUNK

George Chamineak, a switchman living in the 2000 block of Angelica street, was sentenced to 30 days in the Workhouse today by Police Judge Morris Rosenthal on a charge of driving when intoxicated. His driver's license was suspended for 90 days.

Chamineak was arrested yesterday after he failed to reduce speed at several intersections on Blair avenue. He also was fined $50 for destruction of property, a charge based on his throwing a beer bottle through the front window of a tavern.

N.Y. CENTRAL AND PENNSY FILE NOTICE OF FARE RISE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (AP) — The Interstate Commerce Commission reported yesterday the New York Central and Pennsylvania railroads have filed formal notice of proposed passenger fare increases effective Nov. 1. The proposal would advance the first-class fares in sleeping parlor cars by 15 per cent, and coach fares by 5 per cent.

New York Central and the Pennsylvania have increased passenger fares twice since early 1957. Coach and first-class fares went up 15 per cent in May 1957 and rose another 5 per cent last Jan. 1. The proposed new mileage rates would be 6.32 cents first-class and 4.092 cents for coaches.

Eight New England railroads last week notified the ICC of proposals to increase their passenger fares, both first-class and coach, by 5 per cent Dec. 1.

Christian Science
meets a universal need

The one thing that cannot be quenched in the human heart is the longing to find God—to feel assured that there is a supreme creative divine intelligence, controlling the orderly reaches of star, and space, and man.

By thoughtful study of Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures by Mary Baker Eddy, together with the Bible, many have found not only lasting peace of mind, but health and freedom from all manner of human ills—often after other means have failed.

BAR UNIT REPORT URGES DEFEAT OF 2 MAGISTRATES

Republican opponents of two incumbent Democrats running for re-election as magistrates were endorsed today in a report by the magistrate court committee of the Bar Association of St. Louis.

The Democrats who failed to obtain the support of the committee, for the Nov. 4 general election, are James W. Royal, first district, and W. S. Diuguid, tenth district.

Charles G. Kratochvil was recommended in the first district, and Silas E. Garner in the tenth.

The committee made recommendations or withheld them in five other districts where there are contests in the races for magistrate.

The report has been mailed to members of the bar association, and it is to be submitted to the membership for action at a meeting Oct. 20, at the Elks Club in Clayton.

The committee is headed by Raymond P. McNally, chairman, and consists of nine other members.

The committee said the candidates were given an opportunity to meet with the members, and to submit information as to their qualifications. Some did and some did not, McNally explained to a reporter.

The bar panel explained that in its use of the word "qualified" with regard to the candidates, it did not refer merely to possession of minimum qualifications for the office of magistrate, but to possession of "such professional ability and judicial temperament as to reflect credit upon the bench and court system."

McNally declined to reveal specific reasons for any of the committee's choices.

In addition to the first and tenth districts, the following others were reported upon:

Third—No recommendation as to James W. Harvey, incumbent Democrat, and Ellis Outlaw, Republican.

Fifth—Anton Sestric, incumbent Democrat, recommended over Lester D. Hunter, Republican.

The committee said it lacked enough information about Hunter to make or deny a recommendation.

Sixth—Recommendation of both William Nicholls, incumbent Democrat, and Irwin J. Roszel, Republican.

Seventh—Recommendation of Thomas Gabbert, incumbent Republican, over Irwin L. Ruzicka, Democrat. The committee said it lacked enough information about Ruzicka to make or deny a recommendation.

Ninth—Recommendation of Lawrence O. Willbrand, incumbent Democrat, over Morris Matichett, Republican. Again the committee said its information about Matichett was insufficient to make or deny recommendation.

One member of the committee, Winston Cook, said he took no part in the report, because he felt it was not a proper function of the committee.

Israel-Jordan Clash.
JERUSALEM, Israel sector, Oct. 3 (AP)—An Israeli military spokesman claimed Jordanians opened fire on an Israeli patrol today inside Israeli territory east of the central sector of the Jordan-Israel armistice line. The spokesman said the Israelis returned the fire and silenced the Jordanians. There were no Israeli casualties, he said.

G-E Announces New and Exclusive 5-Cycle Feature on 1959 Filter-Flo Automatic Washer

Now washing becomes as easy as pointing, with the new Filter-Flo by General Electric. With a touch of a key and a turn of a dial, you get the right combination of wash and rinse speeds, wash and rinse temperatures and washing time to suit any clothes load.

Cycle 1 is for regular cottons and linens. These require a normal wash action and hot wash water to thoroughly clean these often used articles; a warm rinse and a normal spin speed that damp-dries.

Cycle 2 is for non-colorfast cottons and linens. Washing conditions are pre-set to automatically provide warm wash water (instead of hot) to prevent colors from running.

Cycle 3 is for sturdy synthetics. Normal wash action; warm wash water (hot wash water could damage synthetic fibers); a cold rinse and a slow spin to avoid spin-set wrinkles.

Cycle 4 is for delicate synthetics such as party dresses and dainty wash and wear items. A slow wash action is automatically provided to give gentle washing to these fragile garments.

Cycle 5 is for special items such as woollens and silks. A woolen blanket, for instance, automatically gets slow wash action to minimize piling, warm wash water to prevent shrinkage, cold rinse to reduce wrinkling and normal spin to remove the water a woolen blanket absorbs.

1959 Filter-Flo Has Special Rinse Dispenser

A special rinse dispenser adds fabric or water softener to the rinse portion of any cycle—automatically. Clothes have a fresh, like-new look and synthetics come out static-free. In addition, the Filter-Flo features a water saver control for small loads. Simply touch the water saver button when the desired water level is reached. Over 20 gallons of water can be saved during a complete washing action.

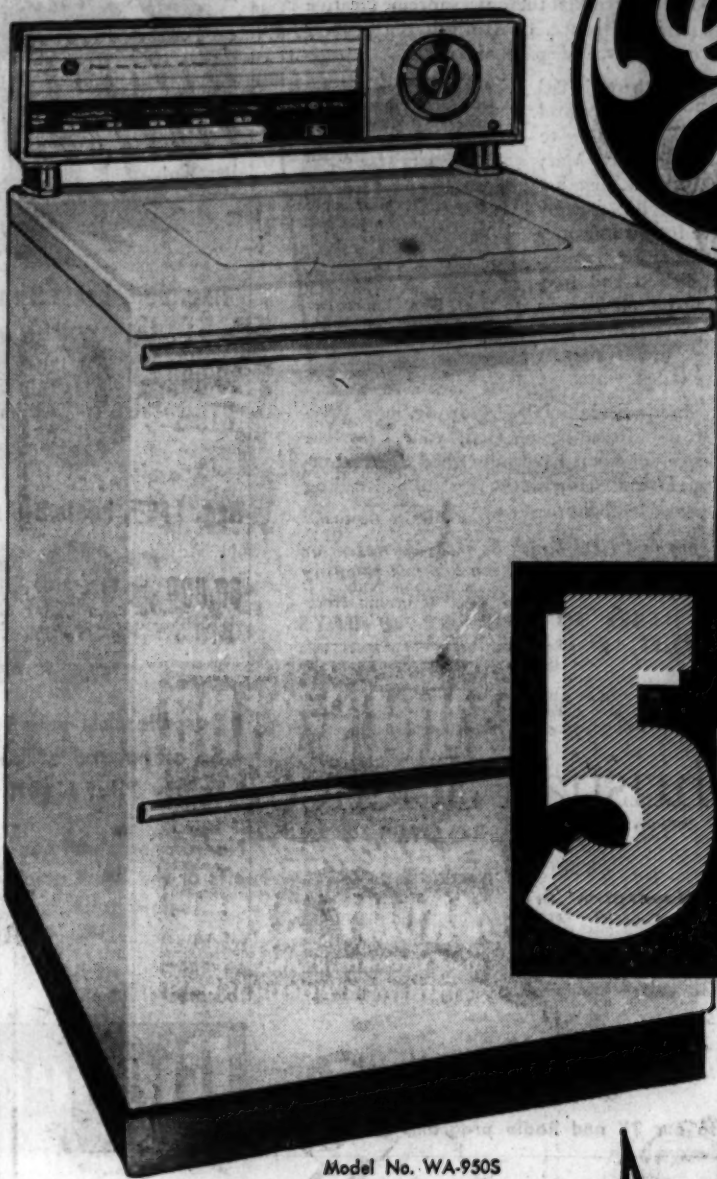

Filter-Flo's Automatic 5-Cycle Selection is Exact and Accurate

By pressing a key and turning the numbered dial to the matching number you automatically get the right combination of wash and spin speeds, wash and rinse temperatures and times for the cycle selected. For example, if you are washing white or colorfast articles you press key No. 1 and turn dial to No. 1. This setting automatically gives you normal wash action at 70 strokes per minute and normal spin at 610 revolutions per minute, hot wash water, and warm rinse. If delicate synthetics are being washed you press key No. 4 and turn dial to the matching No. 4 position. Automatically the washer provides a slow wash action at 40 strokes per minute, a slow spin speed of 350 revolutions per minute, warm wash water, and cold rinse.

Matching High-Speed Dryer Available

The new 1959 General Electric Clothes Conditioning Dryer has an automatic control that dries any washable just right! A single dial setting gives you the correct drying temperature for any fabric. There's no overdrying or underdrying. Dries a typical family load of clothes in less than 35 minutes.

NEW

TOUCH ONE KEY, TURN THE DIAL

... and you get the correct water temperature, wash and spin speeds, and time to suit your clothes load. No other washer does so much automatically. Now, there's no more guesswork about temperatures and speeds... no complicated guide to follow. Just touch and dial... for really clean clothes.

HOW TO BUY A "GIRL'S BEST FRIEND"— DIAMONDS BY FREUND'S

Authorized Member of The Diamond Council of America

PART I

What important things should you know before you purchase a diamond can be summed up in the "Four C's."

The "Four C's" of diamond buying are as important as the ABC's of spelling. The first "C" that should be considered is Carat. In diamonds, the Carat is a unit of weight equaling 200 milligrams, and each Carat is divided into 100 points. Thus, a 25 point stone is the same as one weighing 1/4 Carat. Also remember that as the size of the diamond goes up, the price increases more than proportionately because large stones are rarer, and thus more expensive than smaller ones.

The second "C" that should be considered is the Cut of a diamond. The fire and brilliance of a diamond will depend largely on the Cut—the gem's shape and the arrangement of the facets or planes which catch the light, and give the stone its sparkle. The most popular Cuts are 1) the brilliant (round); the overwhelming favorite 2) the marquise (boat-shaped) with faceting similar to the brilliant; 3) the emerald cut (square or oblong) with facets polished along the sides and parallel to them and diagonally across the corners. All three diamond cuts contain 58 facets, the angles of which are mathematically calculated and should not vary by more than half a degree.

This is Part I of a two part article giving you valuable information on diamonds, presented by Freund's—Authorized member of the Diamond Council of America in St. Louis. Part II will cover the third and fourth "C" of good diamond buying.

ADM. O'BEIRNE GIVEN STRIKE KEEPS MORE JOINT CHIEFS POST THAN 40 SHIPS IDLE

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (AP)—The Joint Chiefs of Staff yesterday named R. Adm. Frank O'Beirne director of operations, virtually completing the strengthening of their agency under the Pentagon reorganization act.

Only one top job remains to be filled, that of director of personnel.

A Pentagon announcement disclosed that the Joint Chiefs have been building up their operating staff through the summer in expectation of final approval of legislation designed to centralize greater authority in the Joint Chiefs and the Secretary of Defense. The legislation was approved shortly before Congress adjourned in August.

Under the reorganization, officers who formerly were deputies to the staff director have become directors in their own right. The directors and their assignments follow:

Intelligence, Air Force Brig. Gen. R. A. Brettwieser; operations, R. Adm. O'Beirne; logistics, Army Maj. Gen. G. N. Loden; plans and policy, Army Maj. Gen. D. V. Johnson; communications and electronics, Army Maj. Gen. James Dreyfus; and director for military assistance affairs, R. Adm. J. W. Cooper.

In addition to the top directors, the staff includes a three-man joint strategic survey council, now composed of Army Maj. Gen. P. W. Caraway, R. Adm. P. L. Dudley and Air Force Maj. Gen. R. H. Terrell.

Princess Flies to Scotland. LONDON, Oct. 3 (UPI)—Princess Margaret flew to Scotland to join the Queen at Balmoral Castle today only a few hours after returning from a four-day visit to Belgium.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (AP)—The strike of union deck officers against 20 American steamship firms entered its third day today, with more than 40 passenger liners and freighters tied up in ports from Boston to New Orleans. Federal mediators had no luck in talks yesterday with representatives of the striking, 1300-member Masters, Mates and Pilots Union and the employer group, the American Merchant Marine Institute.

The companies affected operate about 310 vessels. All the ships face a tie-up when they come into East and Gulf Coast ports. Tankers and foreign flag ships are not affected. Neither are the ships of several American companies which already have signed contracts with the union.

The United States Lines yesterday laid off 1734 crewmen of its 53,000-ton liner United States and the smaller America.

The dispute involves vacation, pension, welfare and fringe benefits. Wages are not an issue. The strike started after midnight Tuesday when the old union contract expired.

John M. Franklin, president of the United States Lines, continued to operate the ship. The dispute involves vacation, pension, welfare and fringe benefits. Wages are not an issue. The strike started after midnight Tuesday when the old union contract expired.

John M. Franklin, president of the United States Lines, con-

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH Fri., Oct. 3, 1958 13A

tended yesterday that union's demands were prohibitive, adding: "We're determined to fight it through."

Franklin estimated the walk-out eventually could affect 100,000 crewmen. If the strike is protracted, he said, "It will have repercussions on all types of industry which is dependent to a major extent on foreign trade."

It was the first time in its six years of service that the liner United States has missed a trip. The liner America was tied up 11 years ago because of labor trouble. Negotiations in the dispute were broken off on Wednesday.

43 U.S. AIRMEN HELD BY IRAQI FLY TO W. GERMANY

FRANKFURT, Germany, Oct. 3 (AP) — Forty-three United States Air Force officers and men detained in Iraq after the July revolt against the monarchy have been flown out to West Germany. The five officers and 38 enlisted men had been confined at Habbaniya air base 60 miles west of Baghdad.

They are now being interrogated by military authorities on their experience during and after the revolt that overthrew King Faisal. They are under strict orders not to talk with newsmen.

The airmen were ordered by the revolutionaries to stay in their barracks area for about 14 days after the revolt. Later they were given the full run of the air base. On Sept. 27 they started to return to Germany, stopping overnight first in Baghdad and then flying out on commercial planes.

Juvenile Infiltration.
BERLIN, Oct. 3 (UPI)—Communist East German police have arrested a 13-year-old West Berlin boy because he carried some American wild west stories and comic books with him on a visit to East Berlin. West Berlin police reported today.

INDICATES U.S. OPPOSES RAISING A-TALKS LEVEL

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (UPI)—The United States indicated today it will reject Russia's effort to raise to foreign minister level the forthcoming negotiations on suspending nuclear weapons tests.

The hint came when State Department spokesman Lincoln White announced that Secretary of State John Foster Dulles would be in Seattle, Wash., from Nov. 10 to Nov. 14 heading the United States delegation to the Colombo plan meeting dealing with southeast Asian economic development.

The nuclear talks are scheduled to begin in Geneva, Oct. 31. United States officials said they should last at least one month.

Russia proposed Wednesday that the United States, British and Soviet foreign ministers head delegations to the Geneva conference because of the urgent need for negotiating a nuclear test ban. The United States previously named Ambassador James Wadsworth, deputy United States representative to the United Nations, to head the United States delegation.

White said the United States expects the Geneva talks to go ahead on schedule despite Soviet resumption of nuclear testing.

Russia confirmed last night it had resumed testing of nuclear weapons after it had announced last March 31 it was halting such experiments. The new Soviet announcement accused the United States and Britain of forcing the resumption because the Western countries refused to follow the Russian lead.

The AEC announced last night Russia had exploded two more nuclear weapons of "moderate" size at its proving ground north of the Arctic circle. The tests were the third and fourth reported by the AEC in the last two days.

Sources here were perplexed by yesterday's Russian statement accompanying his test resumption confirmation, that the Soviets desired the "immediate and universal termination for all time of the tests of atomic and hydrogen weapons." They said the Russians failed to make clear whether they would stop tests as of Oct. 31.

Reservation by West. The sources pointed out that this country and Britain have reserved the right to resume their tests if Russia does not follow suit after that date.

Russia charged that this country and Britain, by continuing the tests, were "in effect intensifying the arms race in an attempt to win military advantages for the realization of their policy of military threats."

This, the Russian announcement said, meant Russia could not allow "the security interests of the Soviet state to suffer because of such actions of the United States and the United Kingdom."

U.S. CLAIMS IT RETAINS COMPLETE CONTROL OVER THOR MISSILES IN BRITAIN
LONDON, Oct. 3 (UPI).—The United States has claimed complete control over Thor missiles sent to British bases and not just over their atomic warheads, official sources disclosed today.

It had been assumed previously that American control would be limited to the atomic warheads of missiles sent here under a mutual assistance agreement.

The United States stand now makes it clear Britain will not be in a position to use the missiles without specific American consent.

There had been indications the British planned to supply their own warheads in the belief they could exercise control over the Thor's propulsion unit.

Dead-End Street Opens Like Magic
WICHITA, Kans.—Mrs. E. L. Radcliff, 1549 South Clara, says: "I tried many things, and Baker's Hair Tonic is the only product I could find that would clean up dandruff and itchy scalp." It's so easy and pleasant to use. Not messy or greasy like so-called dandruff remedies. Use it any time, anywhere. There is no Federal excise tax on Baker's Hair Tonic, because it's a specific for dandruff. If you have been traveling down what seemed to be a dead-end street looking for something to clean up dandruff and itchy scalp, your search will end like magic when you use Baker's Hair Tonic. That's a positive guarantee, or money back. United Kingdom."

MAN HURT FLEEING POLICE
IN UNION, MO., DIES OF INJURY

Louis C. Hinson, Union, Mo., died at St. John's Hospital early today of a head injury he suffered in Union last Tuesday. The Franklin county sheriff's office told St. Louis police that Hinson had been arrested for drunkenness, fled from officers and ran into a stone wall, injuring his head.

He had been a patient recently at the State Hospital at Farmington. He was 31 years old.

Far East Policy

Liu said he wanted to make it clear only an unarmed C-46 was involved in today's incident—the second plane lost this week. One C-46 plunged into the sea Monday night when it was hit by Communist artillery fire while dropping supplies. There were no survivors.

The Defense Ministry said other transport planes in today's airdrop escaped unharmed. UPI correspondent Robert C. Miller had reported earlier from Quemoy that daylight airdrops were carried out yesterday without damage or losses despite heavy shelling.

Most airdrops have been carried out in darkness while the MIGs were on the ground. There was speculation the MIGs attacked today after yesterday's daylight airdrop was observed by radar—or perhaps as a challenge to the future use of the American flying boxcars.

The Defense Ministry said no protective air cover was flown today although earlier airdrop missions to the Quemoy were escorted by both Nationalist and United States Air Force jet fighters.

The Reds shelled Quemoy again this morning for the fortieth day out of the past 42, hitting Quemoy with 1143 shells between midnight and 6 a.m.

Statements by Dulles and President Eisenhower this week suggesting eventual cutting of Nationalist forces on the offshore islands touched off bitter resentment here and brought a statement by Chiang that Dulles's remarks were incredible.

Report on 'Sidewinders.' The United States embassy also confirmed that Nationalist F-86 Sabre-jets were flying with American-furnished Sidewinder air-to-air missiles.

The embassy, quoting a United States Information Agency Washington dispatch, said the Nationalists were using the Sidewinders "with devastating effect on Soviet-built MIGs in the Taiwan (Formosa) strait area."

The Sidewinders were used in history's first missile battle last Sept. 24 in which Nationalist Sabres destroyed seven Red MIG jets.

The embassy announcement said the nine-foot, 155-pound Sidewinder carried a conventional warhead. Fired singly or in salvos, it added, "this missile can actually zoom into the tailpipe of a jet aircraft and destroy it in a fiery explosion."

The announcement further confirmed that the United States was training Nationalist flyers for the supersonic F-100 Super Sabres, which are the Nationalist's newest and best plane, augmenting the Korean war model Sabrejets and Thunderbolts.

Attack by Newspapers. The embassy statement that there had been no major change in United States Far Eastern policy was issued shortly after three of Nationalist China's largest newspapers attacked proposals for demilitarizing the offshore islands.

The newspaper United Daily News, Formosa's largest independent newspaper, compared the offshore islands with Alaska and asked if the United States would demilitarize the soon-to-be state if Russia called it a threat to Siberia.

The MIG attack on the C-46 followed the arrival in Formosa yesterday of the first three of 16 United States Air Force C-119 Flying Boxcars to be turned over to the Nationalists to increase the capacity of the Quemoy airlift. The C-119s are not yet in action.

OLD HYDE PARK
BE TORN DOWN

The old Hyde Park Brewery, 3807 North Florissant avenue, a North St. Louis landmark since 1876, is being torn down by its present owner, Carling Brewing Co.

Otway W. Rash, Carling general manager here, said there were no definite plans for the block-square site, other than to use it as a parking lot for the more modern bottling plant across the street.

A total of 22 buildings is being razed, under a contract with Aalco Wrecking Co., in the block bounded by Florissant and Twenty-first, Salisbury and Mallinckrodt streets. They range in size from a one-story machine shop to the five-story brew house and six-story storage house. Walls are up to three feet thick.

The brewery has had several owners, more recent ones being Griesedek Western Brewing Co., which bought it in 1948. Carling took the plant over in 1953, but closed it last year and transferred operations to its Belleville plant.

...in Steel it happens fast

The little ones grow mighty fast in the steel business—and it's a perpetual world series.

Some 250 steel companies, big and little, are in a continuous battle for business 12 months of the year.

And the fight for business keeps getting hotter. Today there are 19 companies able to make a million tons or more of steel ingots a year.

Twenty years ago there were only eleven companies that big.

Smaller companies have grown rapidly since then. While the 11 largest steel companies were increasing their capacity 67 percent, all of the other companies boosted their capacity 97 percent.

Competition?...It gets tougher every year!

NIXON'S 'ROTGUT' SLUR HITS G.O.P. SYMINGTON SAYS

By HERBERT A. TRASK
State Political Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

CONCEPTION, Mo., Oct. 3—United States Senator Stuart Symington last night charged Vice President Richard M. Nixon with "playing politics" with United States security and national defense.

Symington, Democratic candidate for re-election, vigorously disputed Nixon's charge, made in a speech Wednesday at San Diego, Calif., that some Democrats were guilty of "rotgut" thinking in spreading "false information" about the relative military strength of the United States and Russia.

In a talk before 300 students and faculty members at Immaculate Conception Seminary here, Symington declared that Nixon ignored the facts and that his talk was actually an attack against members of his own Republican party and of President Eisenhower.

Says He Ignores Findings.

The campaigning Missouri Senator, who has been an outspoken critic of Republican defense policies, also charged that the Vice President ignored the finding of a number of independent studies that the United States has fallen behind Russia in military strength and missile development.

Symington hit back at Nixon's charge that the Democratic administration under former President Truman was responsible for the lag in missile development because of cancellation of the Army's missile research program in 1947.

"At the time of the cancellation in 1947, Gen. Eisenhower was Chief of Staff of the Army, and therefore one of the closest military advisers to President Truman," the senator said.

"No one would have been allowed to cancel any Army missile research program at the time if then Chief of Staff, Gen. Eisenhower, had objected."

"Hence, if there was any justification for criticizing Mr. Truman for any missile action at the time, there would be much more justification for criticizing the then Gen. Eisenhower."

Symington pointed out that he was serving in 1947 as assistant secretary of War for Air, before President Truman named him the first secretary of the Air Force, and "I know what the truth is."

Explains Policy in 1947.
In 1947, he explained, the United States had the atomic bomb, but the hydrogen bomb had not been developed.

"Because of this," he declared, "the scientific and military experts decided to rush the development of the guided missile instead of the ballistic missile. Some five years later, after development of the hydrogen bomb, emphasis was placed on the ballistic type."

The Vice President's charge of "false information" about United States military strength, Symington declared, is an attack upon "many able and objective citizens who have, at President Eisenhower's request, attempted to wade through Pentagon double-talk in an effort to bring the people the truth about our defense position."

He mentioned the Rockefeller report, published by a committee headed by Nelson Rockefeller, Republican candidate for governor of New York, and other studies.

"I know of no objective study about the relative status of our national defense as against that of the Communists which does not imply or state that our survival will be jeopardized unless we face up to the growing economic and physical strength of the possible aggressor," the Senator said.

Symington Challenged by Miss Palmer on Surpluses.

CHILLICOTHE, Mo., Oct. 3 (AP)—Miss Hazel Palmer challenges the prediction of her Democratic opponent for the United States Senate that farm surpluses would pile up higher and higher under the present Republican Administration.

The Sedalia attorney chided Senator Stuart Symington for the remark. In a speech prepared for a Republican rally in the Livingston County Courthouse, she said:

"Under this administration the former buildup of surpluses has been reversed. The United States government investment in surplus farm products owned and under loan has dropped about one-eighth in the past year and a half."

"Farm exports under the Republican Administration have been the highest in the history—68 per cent higher than under the previous Democratic administration and the prices received by the farmers in the first nine months of 1958 were 19 per cent greater than in the same period a year ago."

MAN FINED $350 FOR FIRING WEAPON, DISTURBING PEACE

Richard Reno, a machine operator, was fined $350 in police court yesterday after he was found guilty of discharging firearms in the city, and peace disturbance.

Police testified they were called last Friday after Reno fired a revolver shot in a quarrel with Bobby and Travis Clark, 909 Ann avenue. The Clark brothers reported that Reno arrived at their home on his motorcycle and challenged them to fight. When they declined, he fired the shot, they said.

Reno, who had no weapon when arrested later, denied firing a shot. Judge Rodney Weiss fined him $250 for discharging firearms and $100 for peace disturbance. Reno, 25 years old, gave his address as 5821 Easton avenue.

Freeholders

of other municipalities in the county would be terminated. If the freeholders decide to adopt this plan, they probably would want to include additional provisions to implement the changeover in government, Shewmaker said.

Such provisions might include "requiring the new government to maintain services in any borough or community at least as well as that community has been maintaining them," he said.

The Freeholders would have to consider how much power to give the borough governments, Shewmaker said.

Courts, Schools Would Survive. Existing school districts would not be affected by the proposal, he said, and the present circuit and probate courts in the city and county would become the courts of the new municipal county.

The authors of the plan chose a state constitutional approach that would bring judges sitting in the county under the Missouri Non-Partisan Court Plan that applies to the jurists in the city, Shewmaker said.

In explaining the proposal to the freeholders, which was televised from Educational Station KETC, Shewmaker emphasized that the proposed new central government would be new in all respects.

"It will have a new name, a new charter, a new legislative body, a new chief executive," he said. "Its new headquarters may well be located in the central part of the entire area. Its new boundaries will range from the Missouri river to the Mississippi—a new start will be made for the future, and new opportunities will be opened."

Board of Control. The alternate plan for a metropolitan district government that was offered would leave existing governments intact. The proposed district's "board of control" would be comprised of the mayor of St. Louis and the county supervisor; the city's aldermanic president and the County Council's chairman, and three aldermen elected by the St. Louis Board of Aldermen and three County Council members chosen by their colleagues.

McClellan said the freeholders could decide whether the "executive director" provided for in the plan should be elected by voters or appointed by the board of control.

The district would be empowered specifically to supervise traffic control, operate control and own public transit facilities—but only upon voter approval; develop an economic master plan and control zoning; assess property for taxation; and absorb the Metropolitan Sewer District.

The plan would leave the way open for the proposed district to assume later any of a wide variety of functions, subject to approval by voters; or by a specified percentage of voters with ratification by a two-thirds vote of the full memberships of the County Council and the city's Board of Aldermen.

McClellan pointed out the proposal featured economy. It would "not add another layer of government in the community, he said, because its board of control would be restricted solely to members holding city and county offices. Therefore, the district's administrative expenses would be held to a minimum, McClellan said.

The administrators of each of the public services assumed by the district would be the city and county officials directing that function in their respective jurisdictions, he said. Thus the district's administrators of traffic control would be the Traffic Commissioner of St. Louis, and the Traffic Commissioner of St. Louis county.

Additional cost would be incurred to the extent the proposed district rendered additional and necessary services, McClellan said, adding:

"Additional cost would be incurred by any government rendering such services, no matter what its form. In other words, the only way to avoid additional cost is to learn to live with the problems and sacrifice the future of our metropolitan community."

The board of freeholders will begin comparative discussion of the five plans now before it at 8 p.m. next Thursday, at a meeting to be televised by KETC.

FORMER CONVICT SENTENCED TO 3 YEARS FOR FORGERY

Glenn R. Adams, a former convict of Maplewood, was sentenced yesterday to three years in Federal prison by United States District Judge William G. Juergens in East St. Louis on a plea of guilty of interstate transportation of forged checks.

Government attorneys said Adams cashed three forged checks for $44, drawn on a St. Louis bank, in East St. Louis markets last April. He is 27 years old and formerly lived in the 7800 block of Folk avenue.

U.S. ASKS CZECHS TO FREE 3 G.I.s

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3 (UPI)—The United States has called on Communist Czechoslovakia to release immediately three American soldiers who crossed the Czech border. The three are Pfc. Andrew A. Beltrichard of Nekoosa, Wis.; Pvt. Cole Youngert of Detroit, and Specialist 4/c John F. Kennedy of Philadelphia.

The United States also criticized the Czech government for holding two other Americans who crossed the Czech border this summer but who have since been released. They were M/Sgt. James E. Cole of Connelville, Pa., and John B. Harcastle, a student of Nashville.

The United States chided Czechoslovakia for its "extreme sensitivity about innocent violations" of its border. It said such violations are bound to occur and urged Czechoslovakia to be "realistic" about them. The United States views were contained in a note delivered to Czechoslovakia Sept. 25 and made public by the State Department yesterday.

"It is hoped that after reconsideration, the government of Czechoslovakia will take steps to permit the immediate departure from Czechoslovakia of the three soldiers still in custody," the note said.

It also asked Czechoslovakia in all future cases involving Americans to notify the United States immediately and permit United States officials prompt access to the Americans held. The note said that Beltrichard disappeared from his post on the German side of the German-Czech border July 7 after having been found asleep on duty.

It said he feared punishment to an evening of drinking.

Costly "Scotch on the Rocks." LISBON, Oct. 2 (UPI)—Four men may have to pay high prices for their "Scotch on the rocks." The men were employed on salvage operations aboard the liner Mildebran which has been aground on rocks near the mouth of Lisbon harbor for a year. Police have accused them of carrying off a shipment of whiskey worth $1050.

Military Balance at Quemoy Tips Toward Nationalists but So Far Reds Are Winning War of Words

By HANSON W. BALDWIN

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.

THE FORTUNES OF WAR — though not of diplomacy — have begun to smile on the Chinese Nationalists.

News from the Taiwan (Formosa) strait area has emphasized for nearly two weeks that the military balance in the campaign for the offshore island of Quemoy is tipping toward Taipei. After a bad and dangerous beginning when the Communist Chinese bombardment started on Aug. 23, the Nationalists, with United States help, are solving the problem of the enemy blockade and have established a clear-cut qualitative air superiority.

The Nationalists' successes are purely defensive, limited and incomplete, and could be reversed if the Chinese Communists, backed by Soviet aid, chose to extend the limited battle for Quemoy by enlarging the area of conflict and increasing the strength they have so far committed.

Nevertheless, Taipei's successes could be of great importance to the future of Quemoy, which will be decided by military power and public opinion in this country and overseas. The Communists, so far, have won the battle of global opinion; this is to them the principal part of the battle.

Communist Talking Points. Many sincere and patriotic Americans and probably a majority of the people of the principal Allied nations have been convinced, as the Communists have been saying, that:

1. Quemoy is indefensible because of its proximity to the mainland, a mile and a quarter at the nearest point to Communist held territory, and the 400 to 500 Communist guns that command it from three sides.

2. The offshore islands are not worth fighting about.

3. The Nationalists have no right to them anyway.

The limited Nationalist successes are beginning to demonstrate, though not conclusively, the falseness of the first contention, that Quemoy is indefensible. If this is clearly proved to Peiping and to the world, the other contentions may be subject to re-examination; in any case, the chance of settlement without major war will increase.

Three developments in the fighting since Aug. 23 have greatly strengthened Taipei's position.

F-86 Proving Superiority. The air battles of the last three weeks have proved the clear-cut qualitative superiority of the well-trained Nationalist pilots, many of them with hundreds of flying hours to their credit, and their North American F-86 Sabrejets. The Communists, with far more aircraft, many of them Soviet MIG-17s, with speed and climbing superiority over the F-86, have so far been completely outclassed in the air. The F-86 below 30,000 feet has proved to be a better fighting machine than the MIG-17, partly because of superior armament and gunights.

Recent engagements between the Nationalists have been aided by utilizing the Sidewinder missile, a solid-propellant, air-to-air missile, with infrared homing guidance, manufactured for the United States Navy by Philco and General Electric.

This rocket, one of the simplest, cheapest and most highly successful of all airborne missiles, has an estimated range of three to six miles. It homes on the infrared "or heat" rays given off by the jet engine of an enemy plane and when close enough is detonated by a proximity fuse.

The Sidewinder does add greatly, as Peiping tactics acknowledged yesterday, to Nationalist air strength. Nevertheless, Nationalist qualitative air superiority was well established even before the Sidewinder was used.

Air Victories Impressive. The figures for the "kills" and "probables" claimed by the Nationalists may well be exaggerated. Aircraft losses reported are nearly always exaggerated in war by a factor of as much as three or four.

Nevertheless, the Nationalist claims have been carefully checked by American experts and, regardless of the exact figures, there is no doubt in Washington that the Nationalists have had much the best of every air battle and that the vaunted Chinese Communist air force has so far proved ineffective.

Similarly, the Nationalists, with American help, have won the Communist blockade by no means airtight. Convoys are running the blockade regularly with slight losses, and many new techniques and much larger supply operations are in preparation. Larger amphibious ships and C-119 cargo aircraft, supplied by the United States, will help materially to increase the tonnage supplied to Quemoy.

More Force Required. Quemoy is certain, of course, to remain the Communist supply regimen as long as the Communist shelling continues, but there is no present prospect, unless the Communists greatly broaden the war and utilize more force, that the main island can be starved out or militarily crippled by blockade.

Little Quemoy, and the small islands of Tatan and Ertan — also held by the Nationalists — present considerably more difficult problems, though a solution probably can be found.

The third, and as yet potential, factor of improved Nationalist strength is the successful transfer of United States supplied eight-inch howitzers to the island. Their power and range should materially improve Nationalist counter-battery fire.

Thus, what Secretary John Foster Dulles has described as "some slight tendency toward stabilization of the contesting forces in the Quemoy region" has, as he said, brightened the prospects of peace. For the danger of Quemoy all along has been weakness, physical and moral, that the Communists could exploit. It is as true today as it always has been that superior power, military power and psychological and political power, is the best — indeed, the only — answer to Communist plans for conquest of Quemoy and the world.

Right-to-Work Issue May Be 'Sleeper' Favoring Knowland

Many Californians See Proposal as Way to Clean Up Unions Without Destroying Them.

(FIFTH OF A SERIES.)

IF THERE is any "sleeper" issue that could win the California governorship for William Knowland it is the right-to-work referendum that Californians will be voting on next month.

That may seem like a strange statement, since Knowland's championing of this proposal to outlaw the union shop was one main reason why he did so poorly against Pat Brown, his Democratic rival, in last June's primary.

However, in a week's interviewing through California I found that what to do about labor unions was the one issue stirring strong enough emotions to cause both Democrats and Republicans to break normal party ties.

Also, in many parts of Los Angeles and the agricultural Central Valley I found as many as a fourth of the voters still had not made up their minds on the issue.

Confusion as to Meaning. Some were confused as to what "right to work" meant, several thinking it was aimed at ending discrimination against Negroes in employment. But most of the "undecideds" were torn by a genuine conflict of emotions.

As the wife of a San Francisco telephone worker put it, "There definitely are things about unions that need changing. But if unions are outdone, wage standards may drop. I can still remember my first job back in Blair, Nebraska. It paid only $4 a week."

The recession has stimulated such depression memories. If Knowland is to win he must be able to convince voters that a right-to-work law is a reasonable way of meeting the widespread public desire for "cleaning out but not destroying" the unions.

Of the voters to whom I talked who had made up their minds on the issue, right-to-work was losing by almost six to five—which is one measure of the odds Knowland must overcome. Although I found some Democrats who were shifting to Knowland because of right-to-work, a larger number of Republicans were swinging to Brown.

Nixon Becomes Spokesman on China Policy

Makes Clear in Statement That U. S. Won't Make Enforced Retreat.

By W. H. LAWRENCE

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3.

VICE President Richard M. Nixon put himself forward yesterday as an Administration spokesman for a no-enforced-retreat policy in the Formosa strait.

He volunteered to reporters a formal statement that there had been no recent change or weakening in the United States policy concerning Communist China and the defense of Quemoy and Matsu against armed attack if need be.

Nixon said he spoke with the approval of John Foster Dulles, the Secretary of State, after telephone consultation with him about the contents of yesterday's statement.

It is not customary for the Vice President to attempt to define Administration foreign policy since, under the Constitution, he has no part in its formulation or execution. Implicit in the fact that he volunteered this statement here was that he felt Secretary Dulles and President Eisenhower had not made crystal clear their meanings in press conferences.

China policy earlier this week. Nixon said.

Interpretation of the press conference remarks of the Secretary of State and the President on Tuesday and Wednesday to the effect that they represented a change in United States policy or weakening of our position is completely erroneous," Nixon said.

"We have consistently maintained that we can never accept any arrangement that involves surrender to force or threat of force. But we have from the beginning made it clear that if a cease-fire is arranged the way would be open to negotiate for settlement of some big issues which may have contributed to tension in the area. The Secretary's suggestion that the size of the Nationalist forces on Quemoy and Matsu might be reduced would be an action within this framework. Obviously if there were a dependable cease-fire there would be no reason to maintain such a large percentage of the Chinese."

ADLAI STEVENSON Khrushchev and Mikoyan Tell Why Russia Wants U.S. to Trade

Premier Irritated Over Failure of American Press to Print Full Letter to Eisenhower Proposing Big Increase.

By ADLAI E. STEVENSON

(FIFTH OF A SERIES.)

I HAVE BEEN WRITING about Russia's external relations with foreign nations and the other members of the Communist bloc. And before going on to tell about Russia from the inside, I want to say something about Russia's foreign trade and aid.

Last year Soviet trade reached large proportions. Deputy Premier Anastas Mikoyan told me it was over $8 billion. Trade, like production, is controlled by the state and costs (which we can't accurately compute) are not decisive of prices, as in private business. Consequently Communist trade can be managed to serve political as well as economic ends. For example, Russia can take commodities which others may have trouble selling—Iceland's fish, Ceylon's rubber, Uruguay's wool, etc.

And it is reliably reported that the Communist trade and aid drive has won important economic footholds in some 19 countries from Argentina to Indonesia.

There are other reasons too for this penetration, including long-term low-interest credits, liberal currency provisions and low prices. Russian oil has even invaded the Western Hemisphere—in exchange for Argentine wool, Brazilian coffee and Chilean copper—and at cut-rate prices. Soviet aluminum, tin, platinum and zinc exports have depressed world markets. But most East-West trade is conducted at world prices.

United States trade with the Communist bloc is negligible, less than one-half per cent of our exports last year. Russia is eager for more trade with us. I talked about this with Khrushchev and at length with Mikoyan, the Soviet trade expert and the only top leader who has survived all the bloody purges and convulsions in the Kremlin.

Khrushchev Complains. Khrushchev was irritated that the full text of his letter to President Eisenhower last June proposing a large increase in trade had not been published in the United States. When he added that therefore they could not publish the President's "good reply" for "prestige reasons" you get a glimpse of how touchy they are.

I said he could hardly expect to get new credits from the United States until the lend-lease account from the last war was settled on some reasonable basis. He quickly agreed, but added that any settlement would be only a small part of what we were spending on "anti-Soviet propaganda" and on credits to our allies "to maintain strained East-West relations." And this non-sequitur was quickly followed by the old Soviet argument that comparative sacrifices must be considered—"all the fathers, sons and brothers who died in the war"—in settling their obligation for all the war materials we sent them during the war. I was tempted to remind Khrushchev that Russia was allied with Hitler until he turned on them and that their awful losses were paid for to help us but in self-defense.

He went on to say that he really didn't expect American credits; that American aid, as the case of West Germany showed, was not a matter of expenditure but political policy. Likewise, he said, while America criticizes Soviet concentration on heavy industry at the expense of consumer goods, it won't help us improve the situation by developing, for instance, our chemical industry. Khrushchev's conclusion was that "the Russian people now see that Americans are not really concerned about their welfare but are pursuing political aims of their own."

I wonder if they always charge us with political motives for everything because they always have one? And these curious little contortions of fact to fit everything into a pattern of American malevolence revealed again the obstacles on the road to that mutual "trust" which Khrushchev says we must establish.

Mikoyan is a slight, dark, sharp Armenian, and eager for more trade with us. I asked him some questions and he was off.

MAJOR U.S. ARMS SENT TO ISRAEL, CAIRO PRESS SAYS

CAIRO, Oct. 3 (UPI) — The Cairo press reported today the United States was making major shipments of arms to Israel and accused the United States of trying to interfere in the affairs of Syria.

The newspaper Al Ahran said President Eisenhower and Israeli Premier Ben-Gurion had been exchanging secret messages since mid-May and that the United States was now shipping such major arms as artillery.

Al Gomhouria said it had "important documents" that proved American interference in Syria.

It said it had Baghdad Pact documents containing evidence the United States, Turkey and Iraq planned an attack on Syria when King Faisal was still in power in Iraq. The newspaper said the plan was prepared by Secretary of State John Foster Dulles. It gave no indication why the alleged plot was not carried out.

ATOM POWER FOR GERMANY

SAN JOSE, Calif., Oct. 3 (UPI) — The General Electric Co. today awarded a contract to provide a 15,000 kilowatt boiling water reactor for the first nuclear power station in West Germany.

George White, general manager of the company's atomic power equipment department, said the plant will be at Kahl, near Frankfurt. Construction has begun and is scheduled to be completed by the end of 1960.

Russian Gen. Shvetsov Dies. MOSCOW, Oct. 3 (AP) — The death of Col. Gen. Vasily Ivanovich Shvetsov was announced today by Red Star, the Soviet army newspaper. Shvetsov was a unit commander on the Baltic and Leningrad fronts during World War II. He recently held a position in the Defense Ministry, the paper said. Red Star did not say where, when, or of what cause he died. His age was not given.

Letters from the People

Farming's New Enterprise

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:
Leonard Hall says that, although farm goods we find in the market are becoming more uniform and perhaps more acceptable to the consumer, big-business control over the farmer through contractual farming takes away his independence and possible profit. It replaces these with a minimum wage and frequently in bad years forces him to make changes and purchases on his farm that may bankrupt his operation.

An article in the Mirror of Public Opinion lauds the housewife for her role in demanding volume and quality—and for the resulting revolution in agriculture toward contractual farming.

Although I, too, like to buy uniformly lean bacon at the market, I'd like to see the price of that bacon remain on a supply-demand level that only the competition of independent non-cooperative farmers can insure. How can America's economy maintain itself as a free competitive enterprise? "Possum Trot" Reader

A Need to Protest

I feel much like the reader who asked in this space recently where one could register his horror lest the fate of Quemoy precipitate us into the holocaust of total war.

Where would it do any good to register a protest, President Eisenhower, Secretary of State Dulles, our Congressmen or Senators? Does the President feel it makes no difference how Americans feel?

Put me on record as being another horrified citizen.

'No' to Proposition 8

A proposed City Charter amendment that would go a long way toward wrecking St. Louis's municipal merit system will be on the ballot Nov. 4. Rammed through the Board of Aldermen at the insistence of a shortsighted AFL-CIO leadership, the amendment smacks of politics and spoils. It will be Proposition No. 8. It deserves defeat for a number of good reasons:

First, it would make terms of members of the Civil Service Commission coterminous with that of the Mayor who would appoint them, thereby making possible political domination of the Commission by the Mayor.

Second, it would require members of the Commission to be representatives of special interests, rather than of the community as a whole. One member would represent labor, one business and one would have to be an attorney. In effect, it would change the Commission from a policy-making body to a mere arbitration board.

Third, it would eliminate consideration of an employee's service rating in connection with step increases in salary or layoffs and substitute seniority as the controlling factor in layoffs. The merit system thereby becomes a seniority system.

Fourth, it would give the Mayor and the Board of Aldermen power to set hours of duty, days off, holidays, sick leaves of employees and the like without recommendation of the Civil Service Commission. This will tend to throw basic employment decisions into the political arena where they least belong.

Fifth, the existing ban on political activity by merit system employees would tend to be weakened by permitting city personnel to solicit signatures and votes for and against initiative and referendum petitions.

Sixth, it would freeze into the Charter two provisions that might require substantial increases in the city budget. One would require the preparation of a compensation plan annually based on prevailing wages for similar work throughout the country, not merely the St. Louis area. The other would set up a separate classification for water division employees, presumably as a device to permit them to receive a higher pay scale.

The amendment, which runs to several hundred words, also would attempt to accomplish two objectives now considered illegal. It would set up a publicly-financed health and welfare plan for city employees. The City Counselor's office has held that this is prohibited until the Legislature passes an enabling act. And it would set up grievance procedures similar to those spelled out in ordinary labor-management contracts. The city is prohibited by law from making formal labor contracts.

St. Louisans adopted the present merit system in 1941 because they were sick and tired of the inefficiencies of the spoils system that it replaced. If they want to continue the merit principle in City Hall they will vote No on Proposition No. 8.

A Rocket Share-the-Ride Plan

It has been proposed by the eighth general assembly of the International Council of Scientific Unions, meeting in Washington and representing 21 nations, that those few nations capable of launching satellites reserve some space in them for scientific experimentation by other countries. This would be a most generous step in international co-operation since the limited payload in a rocket for carrying scientific objects into space is at a premium. Certainly American mousedom, which already has supplied some rocket-riders who came to unhappy ends, should not object to allowing mice from South America, Afghanistan or Madagascar to share the honors.

Reasoning for New Jobs

The County Council, which has been dragging its feet on the important Columbia Bottoms rezoning proposal, now is moving to do what it ought to have done several weeks ago. It is preparing to rezone the area, although the method the Councilmen seem to favor—creation of a brand-new zoning category for industrial parks only—will take several weeks to carry out.

Transformation of the swampy and virtually unproductive Bottoms into a thriving industrial area capable of supporting thousands of new jobs would seem to be a project deserving the highest priority. Both the Metropolitan Chamber of Commerce and the Building & Construction Trades Council, among others, think so. They hope the Council will do its part as rapidly as can be.

Until the Council rezones the ground, not a finger can be lifted toward signing up the industries that will provide all those new jobs so necessary to the future development of this whole area. Under the circumstances, this is surely a case of the sooner the better.

Corporations, Eggs and Lasts

Berle and Means have been commenting for years on the changing pattern of corporation ownership. This has shifted from a few individual enterprisers to large numbers of stockholders, and A. A. Berle suggests that eventually corporations may be owned by the pension trusts which, in effect, belong to their employees.

The news that the Scranton Corp., once known as the Scranton Lumber Co., has bought through its subsidiary, Hal Roach Studios, Inc.—the Mutual Broadcasting Co. suggests that the pattern of corporation activities also is changing. One of the Akron rubber companies also went into the entertainment business a while back. St. Louisans are aware that Olin Mathieson has a line of products which ranges from chemicals to rifles, flooring to power tools, and roller skates to drugs. And there are other examples.

Scranton explained that acquisition of a radio network would mean free advertising time for its old-line products: tablecloths, napkins, drapes and the like.

Folk wisdom immediately supplies a justification with its rule against carrying all eggs in one basket. But as usual, folk wisdom also gives just the opposite advice with its warning that the shoemaker should stick to his last. Olin Mathieson, according to Fortune, would be happier if it had stuck to one last—or at least to fewer than those at which it now is hammering.

This is, legally, a problem for a corporation's stockholder-owners and, practically, for its management. But it also is of sociological and historic interest. Americans have accepted the large corporation. Still, they are accustomed to seeing General Motors making automobiles, Standard Oil producing gasoline, and Armour selling hams plus, of course, those inevitable by-products which include everything but the hog's squeal.

Will they now have to accustom themselves to seeing the same trade-mark on the rock-and-roll record which gave them their headache and the aspirin which alleviated it? No doubt it is premature to spot a trend. Still those who rely on folk wisdom know that change is inevitable, and that the least expected is sure to happen.

A Start at Whatever Level

Russia's proposal to conduct the forthcoming talks on an atomic test bar at the foreign-minister rather than the ambassadorial level will not, we hope, impede these vital discussions. The important thing is to get started at some level, and so much spadework is yet to be done that a meeting of ambassadors does seem the better idea initially.

At the same time, the conferees will assuredly need to go to Geneva Oct. 31 knowing their Governments' minds on foreign policy, and keeping in intimate contact with their foreign offices during the deliberations. A 100 per cent perfect job of spadework could be done and still the effort founder on a single point of high foreign policy.

Such a point, outstandingly, is the question of Communist China, without whose participation an inspection plan would be so incomplete as to be potentially dangerous.

Pending the start of the conference, the less the bickering over details of secondary importance, and the fewer the efforts to gain propaganda advantage, the more auspicious will be the outlook for possible good results.

Soviet Russia is reported to have fired at least two new nuclear test blasts recently, thus bringing to an end the "suspension" it announced with so much fanfare at the end of its previous series of tests last March 31. This can be taken as an ill omen for a test suspension, but equally it can be taken as the inevitable symptom of competitive testing. The United States did not announce willingness to suspend until it had gone through its current series of tests; and when our scientists are ready for another series there will be strong pressure to conduct just one more series.

The only way to break into this circle of "just one more round" is to ban tests by general agreement, and to provide inspection to make sure the agreement is being carried out. That remains the job to be done at Geneva starting Oct. 31.

Entertainment in California

One of the most diverting aspects of the California campaign, now beginning to heat up quite noticeably, is the question of who's for and who's against a right-to-work amendment. Senator Knowland is for it and his Democratic opponent for Governor, Attorney General Pat Brown, is against it, but there the simplicity ends.

It appears that billboards have been turning up in California listing eight leaders who "say No on right-to-work." The first name is President Eisenhower's Vice President Nixon is also one of the eight.

Now Mr. Eisenhower and Mr. Nixon, evidently at Senator Knowland's anguished request, are trying to explain. The President says his position is being misrepresented, "notwithstanding that he has been clearly stated several times." He is in favor of states having jurisdiction to pass right-to-work legislation, he says, but whether any particular state should do so is up to the citizens of that state. He got visibly angry when a reporter at his press conference pressed him further.

Mr. Nixon also is being careful. He says he and the President are against a federal right-to-work law but "do not indicate a position one way or the other on state legislation." As a registered voter in California, Mr. Nixon intends to vote on the right-to-work amendment. But he won't tell how.

All of which makes for political entertainment of a high order in California. If anybody finds out just where President Eisenhower and Vice President Nixon stand on the specific right-to-work proposition which their candidate Bill Knowland is supporting, Mr. Knowland no doubt would like to know.

The Price Is High

The Little Rock Private School Corporation, with Gov. Faubus as cheerleader, is trying to create a private school system for 2800 white pupils of three closed public high schools. The task is gigantic if not impossible.

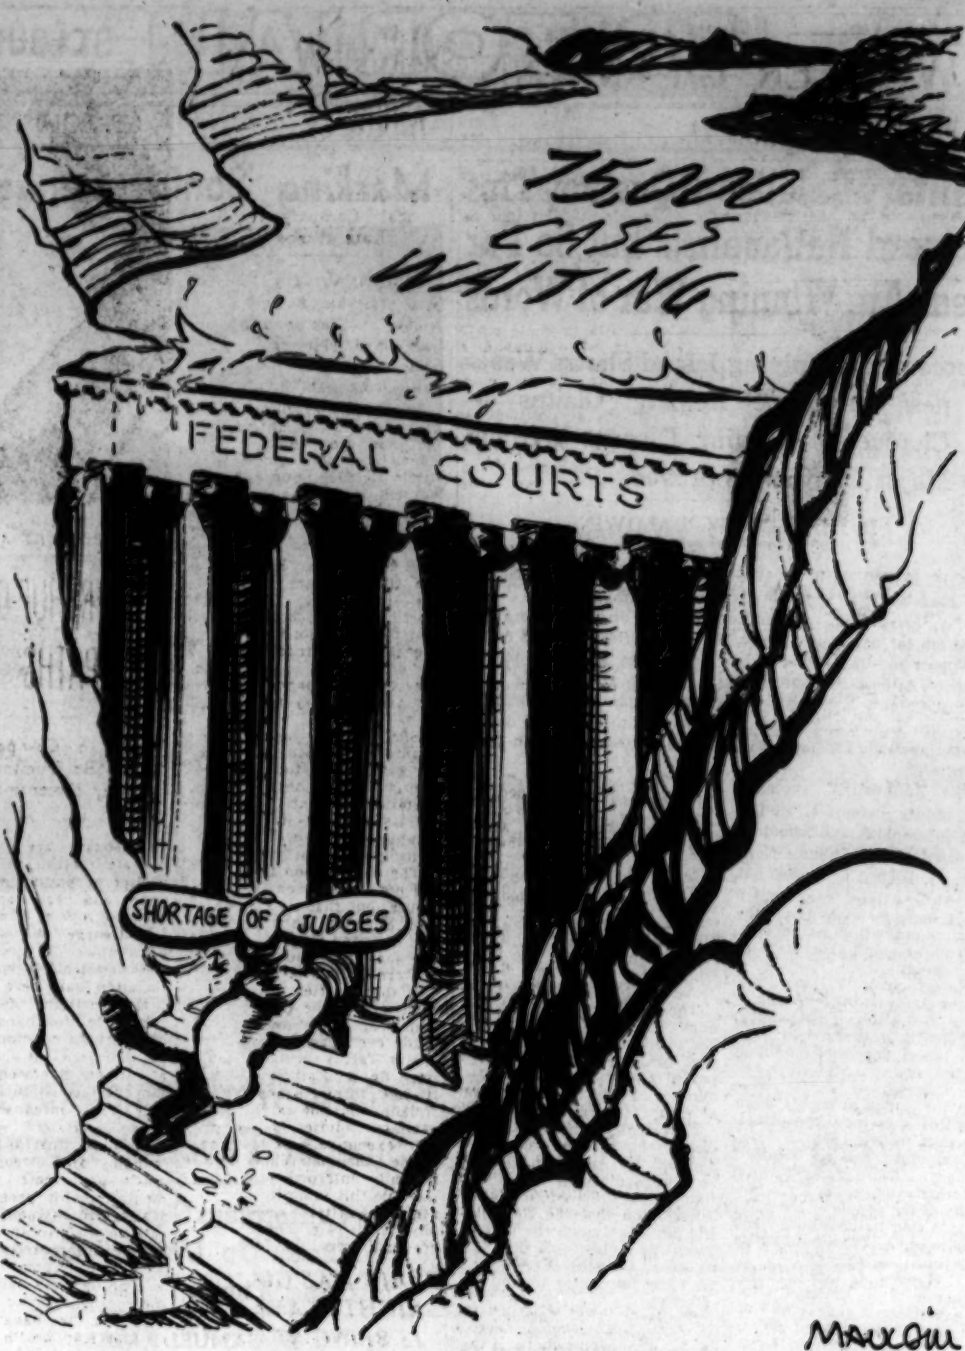

Little Rock came to this predicament by closing schools to avoid integration. At first the private school group hoped to use public school facilities. But this week's Supreme Court opinion made it evident that the United States Court of Appeals will nullify any use of public facilities or money to circumvent the Constitution. So the private schools will be private schools, the Faubusties say. Will such a plan work?

Before it can work, the Private School Corporation must find buildings, desks, chairs, books and competent teachers. The Little Rock Classroom Teachers Association has voted to abide by its public school contracts and not to teach under private auspices.

Before it can work, the corporation must find the money to make it work. The closed public schools incurred maintenance costs up to $22,500 a week, which does not include the capital cost of physical facilities. And the public schools could command support from all taxpayers, including business and industry. The burden of cost of private education usually falls on parents of school children.

Before it can work well, the private schools will have to prove good enough to win accreditation so their graduates may be accepted by major colleges and universities. This was never a problem for graduates of Central High School, which is closed. It will be a problem for graduates of private schools, if these are ever opened—the more so because the students have already lost five weeks of regular schooling.

Segregated schools represented unequal education as between races; private schools threaten to create a new form of unequal education for all students in Little Rock. And that is the highest price of the segregation plan. It should not be long before responsible community voices make it clear that the price is far too high.

Plain Speaking About the Far East

America Needs a Sound Position Built Not on Mythology but on Our National Interests

Adlai E. Stevenson
in a Los Angeles Address,
Sept. 30, 1958

It is time for some straight thinking and plain speaking about our position in the Far East. Indeed, with the guns rumbling again, it is long past time.

In spite of pressure from all sides, I have hesitated to discuss Quemoy because the President has taken an emphatic position, the prestige and power of the United States has been committed to its defense, secret negotiations are under way in Warsaw and the military situation is obscure.

And I have hesitated to disagree with the Government's position also because the Communists have been so outrageous and provocative. Moscow says China must be admitted to the United Nations before any major East-West questions can be decided, and at the same time China says the United States must withdraw from Formosa, let alone the islands, before they will even discuss a cease fire. Such inconsistency and arrogance is intolerable.

"But in matters of national security emotion is no substitute for intelligence, nor rigidity for prudence. To act coolly, intelligently and prudently in perilous circumstances is the test of a man—and also a nation."

"Are the off-shore islands essential to the security of the United States?"

"Are they, indeed, even essential to the defense of Formosa, which all Americans have been agreed upon since President Truman sent the Seventh Fleet there?"

"Can they be defended without resort to nuclear weapons, and if not, are we prepared to use such weapons to defend islands so tenuously related to American security?"

"Finally, are we prepared to shock and alienate not alone our traditional allies but most of the major non-Communist powers of Asia by going to war over islands to which the United States has no color of claim and which are of questionable value to the defense of Formosa?"

"These are the questions that must be answered, this time I hope with more concern for realities in Asia and for unity with our allies, than for fantasies in Formosa and for placating implacable extremists in America."

"Should we be plunged into another great war, the maintenance of our alliances and the respect and good will of the uncommitted nations of Asia will be far more important to us than the possession of these off-shore islands by Gen. Chiang Kai-shek ever could be. Moreover, the maintenance of a united front is of vital importance to the defense of Formosa itself, since their moral support and the knowledge by the Communist leaders that they would be facing a united free world, would be a much more effective deterrent to an assault on Formosa than is our present lonely and irresolute position."

The only interesting thing about those words is that they were uttered exactly three and a half years ago when Quemoy and Matsu were first attacked. I felt that way then and more so now.

I confess I am not sure what the duty of responsible citizenship is at this moment. It does no good at this late date to execrate the Republican leaders—including some Californians—for getting us into this trouble; nor to seek partisan advantage in recrimination over the foolish talk back in 1953 about unleashing

Chiang Kai-shek and all the ensuing mistakes.

But I also think we must get out of the dilemma that has plagued the country since the Eisenhower-Nixon Administration came in: when the foreign situation is quiet, criticism is dismissed as "politics" and "no one is interested," and when we are in another crisis criticism is "unpatriotic" and "will undermine our position."

During the 1956 campaign I tried to keep quiet during the months of gathering crisis in the Middle East so as not to embarrass the Administration. Then came the Suez disaster, just after President Eisenhower had blandly assured the nation that the news was good. This time, distasteful as it is to criticize your Government in such a crisis, I must say what I think.

I think that we, the United States, should not be defending these islands right on China's doorstep. If Marshall Chiang wants to, that's his business. I respect his feelings about them. But I also know how I would feel if the enemy had its foot in my front door. I would try to pinch it off or kick it out.

'Clarify America's Position'

If we avoid war and the crisis subsides, then I think we should get out and stay out of these islands.

But, even more important, I think we must at the first opportunity clarify America's position. How or when, I don't know, but if the Warsaw talks fail and the war gets hotter, I hope we will waste no time asking the United Nations to arrange a cease fire and to consider measures to restore tranquility.

What are the conditions of a sound American position built not on mythology or sentimentality about the Formosa Chinese, but on a cold appraisal of our national interests, our treaty commitments, and our responsibility for peace and security in the world? I suggest that our position must meet these tests:

(1) It should be acceptable to our allies;

(2) It should, if possible, be acceptable to the uncommitted nations;

(3) It should be militarily feasible; and

(4) It should avoid either appeasement or provocation.

I think these conditions would be met by (1) a cease fire, (2) withdrawal of the Nationalist armed forces from Quemoy and Matsu, (3) joint renunciation by Formosa and Peiping of the further use of force against each other, and (4) the declaration by the United Nations and all concerned that the future of Formosa would be decided by the islands' population at a time and under conditions to be determined by the United Nations.

Commands Little Support

We in the United States must recognize that acceptance and fulfillment of such arrangements would hasten the day of Communist China's admission to the U.N. and full participation in the world community. Likewise, if Communist China rejects any peaceful settlement in favor of the sword, her credentials for admission would look far more doubtful to many nations than they do now.

I don't know what's going on in Washington or Warsaw or Formosa or perhaps all this is irrelevant or impossible. I'm sure each side will say so, at least at the outset!

But what isn't irrelevant is the position our China policy has put us in before the world. At present it commands little respect and support. It should be reconsidered and restated without delay. And I think we should make it clear that we do not and will not support any ambitions Marshal Chiang still has against the mainland. He cannot reconquer the mainland of China, however good and gallant his army is. But he can and has brought the United States to the brink of war with Red China.

We should make it clear that the United States is not helplessly entangled with Nationalist China, that it is master of its destiny, free, responsible and resolute.

We should make it clear that we will fight to defend Formosa. It was surrendered by the Japanese and we have as much right to be there as anyone. It is defensible militarily and philosophically.

But the offshore islands are another matter. They have historically always belonged to China. Their military value is negligible. They are indefensible, except by United States involvement at the risk of major war. The fight for these islands is a continuation of the Chinese civil war in which we should not intervene.

In 1934 Mr. Dulles talked about fighting "by means and at places of our choosing."

Most of our friends think we are now committed to fight by means and at places of Gen. Chiang's choosing.

I have read the speeches of President Eisenhower and Secretary Dulles. The President's dramatic comparison of Quemoy with the diplomatic surrender at Munich and Hitler's occupation of the Rhineland, etc. before the last war, were hardly worthy of him. And to classify as appeasers all who oppose war with China to keep Quemoy was below him.

Of course the United States must fight if need be to prevent Communist aggression in the Far East. We have—in Korea. And we will do so again if need be; let there be no doubt that the will to resist clear aggression burns as brightly today as it did in Korea.

When to Stand Fast

To stand fast when you are right is wisdom; to stand fast when you are wrong is catastrophe. To make our stand on Formosa's independence and self-determination would be the support of the great weight of world opinion. But to make our stand on Quemoy may imperil support on more important matters. I suspect our position is not even helping to contain Communism, but creating sympathy for Red China and misgivings about our good sense. It is a policy of disengagement from Quemoy appeasement, as they say, and would be letting down our friends in Asia? I don't think so. I think the world will respect us for recognizing mistakes and correcting them. I think we will win more confidence and support from standing resolutely on the sound principle of defending Formosa than intervening in China's civil war and fighting over small islands which involve no legal or moral obligation.

It is also said that the loss of Quemoy will bring down Chiang's Government and mean the loss of Formosa, and then, like dominoes, Korea, Okinawa, Japan and the Philippines will all fall.

I don't believe it. It doesn't work that way; it didn't in Indo-China. And if Chiang's Government is that weak we shouldn't be propping it up at its weakest point—Quemoy.

But I pray, and I think, that war will be avoided once more because the artillery blockade will fail and the Communists will give time and diplomacy a chance rather than risk a larger conflict. But any respite will be temporary, and the time must be better used than the last three and a half years.

WALTER LIPPMANN

Our Real Interests in Formosa

AT HIS PRESS CONFERENCE, Mr. Dulles went a long way to show he is now genuinely interested in negotiating a settlement of the Quemoy affair. This is the first time he has done that.

In all his previous statements, including the speech prepared for the President, he has been talking as if he expected the Chinese Communists to back down unconditionally, to give up the blockade of Quemoy, and to get nothing in return.

Dulles

On Tuesday he let it be known through the veil of diplomatic language that a bargain might be struck in which Chiang's troops would be withdrawn and saved and the offshore islands would be evacuated.

It is evident, however, that Mr. Dulles is troubled in his mind about this retreat from a defiant showdown into the give-and-take of negotiation.

A Reverse View.

What troubles him is whether in making concessions his adversaries in Peiping may not be encouraged and incited to raise their demands.

"We are having," he said, "a very critical negotiation with the Chinese Communists. They are pushing and probing to find out whether we are weak, or whether we are strong."

It is evident that Mr. Dulles takes it for granted that to offer concessions for a bargain is to be "weak" and that to refuse them is to be "strong."

This, it seems to me, is not a fully considered view of the actual problem in Quemoy and in the Formosa Strait. From the American point of view the true view of Quemoy is that it is a dangerous liability which weakens our power and our prestige in the whole area, and that to liquidate the liability is in fact to strengthen, not to weaken, our position.

Ways to Strength.

For Quemoy is an exposed and vulnerable salient from which a good general would certainly withdraw if and when he was able to do it. And when he did withdraw, and had straightened his line and consolidated his position, he would know that he was stronger than he had been before.

Strategically, a withdrawal from Quemoy will relieve the Seventh fleet of an ugly commitment and will increase the power of the Seventh fleet to defend Formosa. For it will relieve the Seventh fleet of the need to take great and incalculable risks to defend an indefensible island.

With a hundred miles of water and the Seventh fleet between Formosa and the mainland, Formosa is invulnerable to invasion.

A withdrawal from Quemoy to Formosa will liquidate a dangerous liability and will consolidate the strategic position on Formosa. To what end? To establish a position in which we have the time and the opportunity to negotiate without too much pressure, and with deliberation, about the future of Formosa.

A Long-Range Look.

Thus it may be, as many believe, that Chiang's regime will be deeply shaken by a withdrawal from Quemoy, especially as it must now be accompanied, as Mr. Dulles implied, by a renunciation of the hope of reconquering the mainland.

But even if Chiang's regime is shaken, the width of the Formosa Strait and the power of the Seventh fleet would mean that the future of Formosa can be determined, not by fiat from Peiping, but by an international treaty, agreed to by the victors in the war against Japan.

We are disengaged from Quemoy and disentangled from Chiang's ambitions, there would be time to consider calmly what in the long run is truly important to us in Formosa. We know that in the long-run our interest in Formosa cannot be tied up with Chiang's government. For that government is manifestly living on borrowed time.

We know, too, that Formosa is much too near the mainland ever to be considered as an American strategic base. In time of war, Formosa would be a costly liability, what with the missiles that could devastate it and the submarines that could blockade it.

What We Should Do.

Our true interest in Formosa, having done our duty to see that Chiang's people have a safe asylum somewhere, is that the island should not be militarized for an advanced Chinese base against the Philippines.

Our best objective in Formosa is that it should become the autonomous and demilitarized home of the Formosan people, and that they should enjoy the prosperity which the island can afford them.

So we should disengage in Quemoy. We should stand at Formosa for the purpose of negotiation. We should prepare for the passing of Chiang's regime. And we should go before the world in favor of a Formosan settlement of which we are the sponsors, asking no special privileges, strategic or economic, for ourselves.

MARTHA TAFT DIES; WIDOW OF SENATOR

Took Active Part in Political Campaigns of Late Husband.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 3 (AP)—Mrs. Martha Bowers Taft, widow of Senator Robert A. Taft, died yesterday at her home in suburban Indian Hill. She was 68 years old.

Mrs. Taft, who always shared her husband's campaign battles, had been confined to a wheelchair since suffering a stroke in 1950. Funeral services will be held tomorrow with burial beside her husband in an Indian Hill cemetery. He died in 1953.

In 1938, when Taft tried for the United States Senate for the first time, Mrs. Taft startled old-line politicians by stumping Ohio for him, making speeches and arrangements in 85 of the state's counties. One Cleveland newspaper headlined his victory "Bob and Martha Win."

She worked just as hard again in 1944 and in his unsuccessful tries for the presidential nomination. Her illness curtailed her activities, but in his last attempt—in 1952, she conducted a one-woman letter-writing campaign for him.

The team of Bob and Martha did not quite reach the White House, but that is where they met. She was the daughter of the Solicitor General; he was the son of President William Howard Taft. They were married shortly after the Senator-to-be passed the Ohio Bar examination with the highest grade ever made on the test.

Mrs. Taft is survived by four sons, Robert Taft Jr.; William Howard, former Ambassador to Ireland and now a State Department adviser; Lloyd, former executive vice president of the Cincinnati Times-Star; and a family enterprise—before it was sold this summer, and Horace, an assistant professor of physics at Yale. There are 14 grandchildren.

BLAIR HAS GOOD NIGHT, SAYS HE IS BEING STARVED

Special to the Post-Dispatch. JEFFERSON CITY, Oct. 3—Gov. James M. Blair is under observation at St. Mary's Hospital following an attack of influenza, had a restless night and his condition was termed good today.

The Governor, who has been battling the flu for several days, is being kept in a room with no visitors, and is being fed by a nurse. Blair said he was being starved.

His room was filled with flowers, and some were removed to rooms of other patients. Blair suggested that well-wishers send a contribution to the Missouri Golfers' Association Scholarship Foundation, a non-profit organization he recently helped set up to provide tuition assistance for promising young golfers.

The Governor, who had been confined to his bed at the executive mansion since Sunday, entered the hospital Wednesday for observation of a slight lung congestion.

DR. NORTUP DEFINES OSTEOPATHS' POLICY

Ready to Co-operate but Won't Be Dominated, He Tells Convention Here.

Osteopaths are willing to co-operate with all licensed groups of physicians and surgeons and health agencies but not at the price of domination, Dr. George W. Northup of Morristown, N. J., president of the American Osteopathic Association, said here last night.

Dr. Northup, who spoke at the convention banquet of the Missouri Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons at Hotel Sheraton-Jefferson, said that "isolationism in medicine is as unrealistic as it is in world affairs."

He noted that doctors of osteopathy and osteopaths hospitals participate in governmental health programs, federal health payment plans, private health insurance programs and with industrial and union medical programs.

"Through our activity in all these programs, we seek to be a part of the changing pattern of American health care," Dr. Northup declared. "We seek to deserve a place for the osteopathic profession in the nation's health planning, not just to demand it."

At the banquet, Dr. V. H. Casner of Kirksville was honored as retiring president of the Missouri association. He installed his successor, Dr. A. Michael of Jefferson City, and told of the steps taken by the state osteopathic association to co-operate with the Missouri State Medical Association in the state legislature next year for a single licensing law for osteopaths and medical doctors.

Changes in the federal dependents' medical care program were outlined at a convention session yesterday by Col. Edward W. Galt, executive director of the Office for Dependents Medical Care, and Lt. Col. E. G. Rivas of the same office in Washington.

Some restriction of dependents' use of private medical care became necessary, he said, when Congress this year cut the appropriations for these services from a rate of $90,000,000 to $72,000,000 a year.

Congress decided the dependents should use all existing service medical facilities, with civilian facilities handling the balance, the Washington officials said.

The three-day, fifty-eighth annual convention of the Missouri Association of Osteopathic Physicians and Surgeons ends today.

'122' TO BE WRITTEN IN SKY AS UNITED FUND DRIVE AD

Residents of the city and county will be reminded of the United Fund campaign this weekend by skywriting.

The figure 122, which represents the number of health, welfare and character-building agencies benefiting from the $8,598,000 drive now in progress, will be formed at least 15 times by Maurice C. Pierce, former Navy pilot. He will take his bi-winged PT-17 World War II trainer up 10,000 feet to form the letters, each about a mile tall and one-half mile wide.

The stunt will be performed tomorrow or Sunday, depending on whether skies are clear and relatively wind-free. In the event of unfavorable conditions, the figure will be written at a later date. Pierce, who has been skywriting for nine years, is employed by Remmert-Werner Inc.

ART 'ILLUMINATIONS' OUTSTANDING EXHIBIT

Extraordinary Color Transparencies Being Displayed at City Museum.

(Pictures in Everyday Magazine.)

By GEORGE McCUE "Illuminations," an exhibition that could well be one of the most popular shows at the City Art Museum in a long time, opened today.

The exhibition, housed in five galleries, is a display of 50 painting masterpieces from 26 museums in this country and abroad and of the Sistine Chapel ceiling by Michelangelo—all in reproductions.

This probably is the first time in history that a show of reproductions has made the round of major museums and proved a major attraction. But these are extraordinary reproductions. They are color transparencies, enlarged to the actual size of the original painting and displayed in viewing units with controlled rear lighting that produces an effect very near to that of light reflected from a paint surface.

Sistine Ceiling Display.

The Sistine ceiling is in reduced size, in one-quarter scale, because few museums could contain it in full size. Even so, it is 42 feet long, and is mounted in a display unit one-quarter as high as the Vatican chapel. The ceiling reproduction is mounted in curved plexiglass walls, which form an arcade in which the spectator stands to view the softly glowing paintings from below.

The illuminations are to painting approximately what stereophonic sound is to music—a substitute for the real thing, but an exceedingly good substitute, and one that satisfyingly transmits the values and the force of the originals.

The biggest single painting in the exhibition is the monumental El Greco, "Burial of the Count of Orgaz," which towers to a 16-foot height and dominates the show. The smallest is Raphael's "St. George and the Dragon," about 8 by 11 inches. The contrasting sizes, shapes and color intensities are qualities that add to the show's realism, and could not be achieved by any other known reproduction medium.

Museum's Painting Included.

One painting from the City Art Museum's collection, Delacroix's "The Capture of Weinsberg," is included. Tintoretto's "Susanna and the Elders," the original of which was in the museum eight years ago during the exhibition, "Treasures from the Vienna Collections," is back again in reproduction.

Every painting in the show is an illustrious work, and some are almost in the realm of household art by virtue of long familiarity. Innumerable reproductions. There are Leonardo da Vinci's "Mona Lisa," Giotto's "Betrayal of Christ," Jan Van Eyck's "Wedding Portrait of Giovanni Arnolfini," Botticelli's "Birth of Venus," Bruegel's "The Wedding Dance," Gainsborough's "The Blue Boy," "Luncheon on the Grass," Gauguin's "The Yellow Christ," Seurat's "Sunday Afternoon on the Grande Jatte," and others.

Details of Sistine Work.

The Sistine ceiling reproductions are an exhibition in themselves, and nothing short of a visit to Rome could compare with the view of them offered in this display. The large central panels, at the top of the curved ceiling, contain the unparalleled Creation sequence and other Genesis themes. In rectangular panels below this are the 12 figures of Prophets and Sibyls, and spaced between these in triangular spandrels, eight other figures of ancestors of Christ. Finally, in four large corner spaces, are shown the Four Miraculous Salvations of the Chosen People.

The exhibition, developed and presented by Life magazine, is based on selections by a committee of museum directors and art historians. Each work was copied on color film, enlarged to actual size on large sheets of film that were sealed together. The show was opened at the Metropolitan Museum of Art in New York two years ago.

"Illuminations" was previewed last night at a reception for The Friends of the City Art Museum, and will remain on public view through October.

CHRISTMAS CAROLS GROUP BEGINS WORK

47th Season to Get Under Way With Recruitment of 50,000 Singers.

Recruitment of singing groups will start immediately in preparations for the house-to-house Christmas Eve caroling campaign, it was announced yesterday at a board meeting opening the forty-seventh season of the St. Louis Christmas Carols Association.

Mrs. Albert H. Toms, executive director, said a minimum of 50,000 carolers will be needed this year in order to be sure every house with a "welcoming light in the window" is visited by a singing group.

More than 70 institutions in the city and county caring for handicapped children share in funds raised annually by the association.

At the meeting at Ralston Purina Co., Dr. William H. Danforth, 721 Berick drive, University City, was elected president of the association. He is the son of Donald Danforth and grandson of the late William H. Danforth, founder of Ralston Purina Co., who served as president of the carols association for 31 years before his death Dec. 24, 1955.

Other officers were re-elected. They include: Donald Danforth, chairman of the board of Ralston Purina Co., and Preston G. Orwig, both vice presidents; W. Ben Knight Jr., secretary and George F. Engel, treasurer. Offices have been opened by the association at 613 North Sixth street.

Dr. Danforth, who is scheduled to return next week to St. Louis from New Delhi, India, where he is attending an educational conference, succeeded Samuel D. Conant, who served as president for two years, will remain with the association as a member of the executive committee.

Singing groups wishing to participate in the 1958 caroling have been asked to contact the St. Louis Christmas Carols Association office, Chestnut 1-7472, to register and be assigned a route.

POPE GREETS 700 FROM U.S. LED BY CARDINAL SPELLMAN

CASTEL GANDOLFO, Italy, Oct. 3 (AP)—Pope Plus expressed pleasure today at receiving an American pilgrimage led by Cardinal Francis Spellman, Archbishop of New York.

The 82-year-old head of the Roman Catholic Church appeared to be fully recovered from his slight weakness of voice of last Wednesday.

The Pope spoke to 700 American men and women, who have been visiting European shrines, and concluded by giving them his apostolic blessing. Before the audience for the group the Pope received Cardinal Spellman in private audience.

STENGEL PINS HOPE ON LARSEN TO STOP RAMBLING BRAVES

Burdette Puts Yanks 2 Down; Tomorrow's Game at New York

By Neal Russo
Of the Post-Dispatch Staff

EN ROUTE TO NEW YORK, Oct. 3 — Casey Stengel, shaken after an explosion by the man from Nitro, W. Va., Lew Burdette, fell back today on recent baseball history for consolation and, he hopes, inspiration for his battered ball club.

Following that 13-5 battering by the Braves yesterday in Milwaukee, the weary old professor of the diamond was well aware of the big task ahead for his proud Yankees. Only three teams in World Series history have come back to win the October classic after losing the first two games, and one of them—the New York Giants of 1921—downed the Yankees in a best-of-nine series.

"Yes, I remember coming back to beat the Dodgers in 1955 after we lost the first two games," said Manager Stengel in the quiet Yankee clubhouse. "That's what I been telling these guys (writers)." Just the year before, 1955, the situation was reversed. Brooklyn captured the big prize after dropping the first two contests to the Bombers.

Unless Stengel can rally his forces right now, however, he will run into a rougher obstacle in Series history. No team has won the blue ribbon after losing the first three games.

Larsen to Try Tomorrow. As his stopper, Stengel has named Don Larsen, the tall right-hander of perfect-game fame, for tomorrow's contest at Yankee Stadium. Manager Fred Haney of the world champion Braves will start Righthander Bob Rush in the third game.

Action will continue at Yankee Stadium Sunday and the fifth game, if necessary, is scheduled there Monday. Tuesday will be another off-day for traveling with the series returning to Milwaukee Oct. 8-9, Wednesday and Thursday, if the sagging Yankees aren't eliminated by then.

Stengel was disappointed in Bob Turley, his starting pitcher, and even more so in Duke Maas, his first reliever yesterday. Turley, a 21-game winner during the regular season, retired only one of the five batters he faced and Maas yielded a two-run single to Johnny Logan and a three-run homer to Burdette. The seven-run inning was the biggest opening frame in World Series history.

"If we can get somebody to hit and pitch well at the same time, we'll be all right," said Casey. He was referring again to another big first-inning chance passed up by his Bombers. They put three men on with none out but came out of it with only one run.

While most of the Yankees fled from the clubhouse as fast as they could, the triumphant Braves remained in their dressing rooms long after the game, most happy to accommodate photographers and interviewers.

Burdette, still fidgeting with

Mantle Hits Screwball And Sinker for Homers

Mantle's first home run, leading off the fourth inning just before Burdette began a run of 14 batters retired in order, came on a bad screwball, very low, according to Crandall. If Mickey hadn't golfed the ball over the distant center-field fence, it would have bounced into the dirt, Crandall added.

Mantle's second blast, his eleventh in World Series history, was off a sinker, low and away, the catcher said.

Bauer, opening the ninth, hit a slider for his second homer in as many days. The East St. Louis veteran started the game with a single to extend to 16 his own record of hitting safely in consecutive Series games.

The Braves, wasting only three of their 15 hits off five New York pitchers, tied the record for most runs against the Yankees in a World Series game—13. The 1921 Giants, who scored eight runs in one inning, and the '55 Dodgers reached the 13 total against the bombers.

Bill Bruton, co-hero with Warren Spahn in the opener, and Wes Covington each collected three hits. Crandall was the only Brave starter held hitless, but he had only two official times up, walking once and hitting a sacrifice fly.

Burdette, who went into the game with a string of 24 scoreless innings against the Yanks, yielded a single to Bauer to open the game. When Third Baseman Eddie Mathews threw wild to first on Gil McDougald's grounder, there were runners on second and third base.

Mantle drew an intentional walk to fill the bases with none out, but only one run scored as Elston Howard grounded into a force play and Yogi Berra grounded into a double play.

Braves Decide It Early. The counterattack began quickly. Bruton picked on a 3-2 pitch from Turley and drove it high into the right field bleachers. Before the 46-367 County Stadium crowd could quiet down, Red Schoendienst whacked his first of two doubles. Mathews fanned, but Hank Aaron walked and Covington singled a run home.

Maas took over and retired Frank Torre, but Crandall walked to load the bases for Johnny Logan, whose sharp

Dailey on Both Ends Of 'Double'

For the fifth time since the Fairmount Park race meet opened one jockey has plotted both winners in the daily double. Jimmy Dailey did it last night, when he won the first with Benson ($10.60) and the second with Xanthos ($18.20). The double was worth $120 for $2.

Wayne Beck turned the trick July 23 and again on Aug. 23; Bobby Gallimore, Aug. 29 and Dale Parks, Sept. 6.

Dennis Sweeney, 85 Today, Carrying On Lost Bowling Cause

By John J. Archibald

A weathered, wooden sign hangs over the doorway in the midst of one of the city's busiest downtown blocks. It says "Bowling." Four floors up, that is what a visitor will find—bowling, and one of the men who made it great, Dennis J. Sweeney.

Sweeney, owner and proprietor of Sweeney's Bowling Lanes at 720 Washington, is a man out of history who is not only still around, but is still putting in a seven-day week with the sport that became his life. Dennis, now crippled by a medical textbook-like list of ailments, will probably be down at his alleys again this evening, although this is his eighty-fifth birthday.

There will be at least one night a few months from now, however, when Sweeney will have to take time off. The American Bowling Congress tournament will start here in February and sometime during the three-month spectacle bowling will pay tribute to Dennis Sweeney, the man who was most responsible for the tournament being held in St. Louis in its only other appearance, in 1907 and 1911.

It is for more than his original organization of the bowling game, however. One of his most noted achievements was stimulating the forming of the Women's International Bowling Congress in 1916, an indication of how he struggled long ago to interest women in the sport and bring tensins to the all-family status it now possesses.

Sweeney was also one of the original organizers of the Bowling Proprietors Association of America, a group which now includes a majority of the tenpin houses in the nation. He was among the pioneers in features of the game that are now commonplace, such as the 35-week league schedule and the idea of having two leagues roll in a house each night instead of one.

It is surprising to find a man of such vision struggling to keep going. While his eight-lane establishment has all the facilities necessary and the well-seasoned alleys are probably higher-scoring than in many other houses, the public is usually attracted to the up-to-the-minute lanes nearer their homes. It is hard going these days for a downtown bowling alley and Sweeney's is the lone survivor of what once was a sizable group of tenpin places in the area east of Twelfth street.

The A.B.C. tournament that will occupy the 138th Infantry Armory from Feb. 14 through early May will bear little resemblance to the events that Sweeney brought to St. Louis some 50 years ago. While about 30,000 bowlers will compete across a gleaming spread of 38 lanes laid out on the drill floor this spring, in Sweeney's day it was largely a one-man operation and Dennis was the man.

"In 1907 I hardly left the West End Coliseum building during the 16 days the A.B.C. ran," Sweeney recalled. "My wife, Mae, brought me clean shirts and I ate on the run. You won't believe this, but we operated the A.B.C. in those days without paid scores!"

As head of the St. Louis committee, Sweeney had to do a lot of politicking to get the A.B.C. to hold its tournament here and a group of Easterners rebelled for a time when the convention at Louisville in 1906 failed to bring the meet to the Mound City. They formed a new organization, but before long their anger cooled and it wasn't as difficult to get the tournament again in 1911.

It was during the 1907 A.B.C. that Sweeney held the first national women's tournament. He obtained permission to use the A.B.C. alleys and many of the participants were wives of bowlers competing in the A.B.C. itself. Sweeney held a number of women's tournaments after that and at each gathering of the ladies he encouraged them to form their own governing organization.

In 1916 a group was finally formed, and although it underwent various changes in rules and title in the years that followed, it is regarded as the forerunner of the present W.I.B.C. that has 2,000,000 members. Sweeney's picture hangs in the W.I.B.C. office in Columbus, O.

Mr. and Mrs. Sweeney, who will celebrate their fifty-fourth wedding anniversary Nov. 11, have five sons: Ed, Henry, John, Morgan and Bob. Henry is the manager of Sports Bowl, where the 1954 W.I.B.C. tournament was held.

A broken hip suffered a few years ago has slowed Sweeney considerably and has prevented him from going out to organize new leagues for his alleys. That used to be the way he'd keep his place seasonably busy, developing new bowlers and keeping them until a newer establishment lured them away.

He still goes down to his downtown establishment every evening from 6 until midnight and "I'm still organizing leagues," he said, "for anyone who wants to bowl."

Purchased by Officer of Brokerage Company

This Williamsburg colonial style house, recently completed at 30 Frontenac Estates by Leo J. Rickhoff Jr. Construction Co., has been sold to Mr. and Mrs. Albert Gummertsbach. It is on a tract of approximately one acre, is air conditioned and contains eight rooms and three baths. As part of the transaction, the Gummertsbachs traded in their residence at 38 Chafford Woods to the builder, who then sold it to William and Betty Lou Lynch. Ella Husch then purchased a house at 8738 Antler drive which had been traded in by the Lynchs. Gummertsbach is an officer at Dempsey-Tegeler & Co. Bayer-Rickhoff Real Estate Co., Inc., negotiated the deals.

Powell Asks Extension Of F.H.A.

COLUMBUS, O. — To help families buying their homes with mortgages insured by the Federal Housing Administration achieve their goal with greater ease and speed, F.H.A.'s Certified Agency Program should be expanded to make it operative throughout the entire nation, a spokesman of the National Association of Real Estate Boards declared here Wednesday afternoon.

O. G. "Bill" Powell, Des Moines, Ia., chairman of N.A.R.E.B.'s Real Estate Committee, made this assertion before the closing session of the Ohio Association of Real Estate Boards in the Deshler Hilton Hotel. The N.A.R.E.B. is the legislative liaison arm of the 63,000 realtors of the association.

Originally designed for smaller communities some distance from the nearest of the 70 F.H.A. field offices scattered throughout the country, the CAP—now active in 19 states—was expanded early this summer to include some large cities.

Cuts Process Time.
Under the program, approved lenders may do some of the F.H.A. work such as the credit processing of persons applying for F.H.A. home mortgage insurance. This, plus the permissive use of fee rather than F.H.A. staff appraisers and inspectors, has cut the time required for the processing of F.H.A. applications "from several weeks to several days," Mr. Powell explained.

Recalling that approximately two out of every three houses bought are existing structures, the Des Moines realtor praised the potential of the CAP to the average home-buyer by reporting that through the end of August, 86 per cent of the 7614 F.H.A. insurance commitments made through the program were on existing homes.

"This is one reason for our enthusiasm over the program," Powell said. "We look for its extension to Ohio in the near future."

Turning to other future legislative and administrative developments in the housing field, the R.W.C. chairman warned that the controversial issues which prevented the enactment of a general housing bill in the last session of Congress will arise again next year.

He warned that an omnibus housing bill is almost certain in 1959. The non-controversial regular F.H.A. mortgage insurance programs will require additional insurance authorization and the F.H.A. Title I home improvement program will expire on June 30, 1959, unless the Congress acts to extend it. He anticipated that tremendous pressures will be generated to force into law many of the objectionable provisions of the unsuccessful 1958 bill, using these non-controversial features as a lever, he explained.

Supports F.H.A.
Among the "objectionable" measures seen by Powell as likely to re-emerge were proposals to make permanent the use of Treasury money to support mortgages insured by F.H.A. and guaranteed by the Veterans Administration as prices in excess of value by buying them at par.

Powell explained, however, that N.A.R.E.B. supports the special assistance functions of the Federal National Mortgage Association. "Under this operation, F.N.M.A. draws upon the Treasury for funds with which to buy mortgages," he said. "As originally conceived, this program was designed to assist special types of mortgages such as Sections 220 and 221 whose marketability was uncertain, and the F.N.M.A. would fix the prices which would be above the market but not so high as to preclude private money from participation."

In next year's housing legislation, Powell said, realtors will seek "amendments which will widen home ownership opportunities within the framework of private enterprise."

Among these amendments is one that will strengthen the "trade-in house" program of F.H.A. Under this program, a family purchasing a new home from a broker or builder may sell their present home to the broker or builder at a mutually agreed upon price and apply the equity toward the purchase of the new residence. The broker or builder taking title to the original home is now limited to 85 per cent of the F.H.A. mortgage insurance to which a qualified private purchaser would be entitled. This has acted to restrict the acceptance of this program by brokers and builders.

Under an amendment supported by N.A.R.E.B., this obstacle would be overcome by making the broker or builder eligible for the maximum amount of F.H.A. mortgage insurance available to a qualified home owner.

Resumption of 'Suburban Boom' in Shopping Center Construction Predicted

A slight lull may soon follow the present wave of shopping center building, but the resumption of the "suburban boom" in the 1960s when the World War II babies reach marriageable age, will start a new surge of shopping center construction.

That is the prediction of Homer Hoyt, Washington, D.C., realtor and market analyst, writing in the new book, "Real Estate Appraisal Practice," published by the American Institute of Real Estate Appraisers. The Institute is one of 10 professional affiliates of the National Association of Real Estate Boards.

Just off the presses, the new publication contains 58 articles from the Appraisal Institute's "Silver Anniversary Short Courses" which were presented in Chicago.

In a chapter on "Characteristics of Shopping Centers," Hoyt asserts that most of the population growth of the next few decades will be in suburban areas. "As houses are built in areas beyond the existing settled areas, present regional shopping centers now on the outer edges of the urban growth will be in the center of a dense population," he declares.

Highway a Factor.
The Washington appraiser points out that the new federal highway pattern, with limited access roads between major cities, will be the primary factor in locating the regional centers of the 1960s.

"Instead of building centers on the edge of the old cities as the first shopping center promoters did 10 years ago, the new centers will be located at a central point between a number of large and small cities," Hoyt said. As an example, he cited Allied Stores' North Shore Center at Peabody, Mass., 20 miles north of Boston, which he said taps a population of 1,500,000 in numerous surrounding towns, cities and villages.

"In the future, as in the past, the means of transportation from home to shopping centers with ample selection of fashion goods will be the governing factor in the location and composition of the regional center," the author-appraiser declared. "In this age, highway access, ample free parking, and a complete selection of merchandise are, and will continue to be, decisive in the creation of successful regional shopping centers."

Sees New Pattern.

Hoyt suggested also that as a result of the impact of the suburban center, a new type of downtown retail area may come into existence. As an illustration of what may be expected, he cited proposed plans for Fort Worth, Tex., and Detroit, in which the main downtown streets would be made pedestrian malls, with parking garages on the edges of the downtown area and moving sidewalks to bring shoppers and office workers from their cars to the center of the city.

"Such a revamping," he wrote, "accompanied by an improvement in the mass transit facilities which gave these central areas their original importance, would tend to establish a pattern somewhat similar to that of the regional shopping center—a belt of parking surrounding the stores with a pedestrian mall in the center."

Other subjects covered in real estate appraisal practice include: fundamentals, single-family dwellings, apartments, retail store properties, hotels, motels, sandwich leases, special purpose properties and rural real estate.

Fanny May Continues Effective

By EDWARD COWAN

WASHINGTON, D.C. (UPI)—Although officially dead, the Government's anti-recession mortgage purchase program is expected to continue giving the economy a lift and to ease borrowing for home buyers.

With the billion dollars voted by Congress last spring paid out or tied up in purchase commitments, the Federal National Mortgage Association (Fanny May) announced the program had been terminated.

But, Fanny May officials said, although no more purchase commitments can be issued to lenders, the program is in one sense very much alive in that:

—Construction on many of the houses it helped finance is still to be completed, or in some cases even started. Home building means jobs, materials, furniture, appliances, new retail stores and community facilities. All are plus factors on the economic balance sheet.

—Fanny May will be pumping nearly all of the billion dollars into the mortgage money market in the next 12 months as the new houses are completed and the mortgages are delivered to Fanny May. (The agency may not make payment until the house is completed and occupied.)

This infusion of government money, officials say, should ease credit or at least mitigate any tightening.

In short, the program should continue to spark business and make borrowing by home buyers easier than it would be otherwise.

Indeed, there was some talk in several quarters here of a possible renewal of the program. As one congressional source put it:

"Sure they (Congress) might go for it, especially if the unemployment figures don't look too good. The people who have most influence over housing legislation like the program in principle. And if the November election gives the Democrats even more seats, the thing has a decent chance."

Even its opponents rarely deny that the mortgage purchase program helped boost housing starts this year, particularly in the low and medium price brackets.

W. Franklin Morrison, president of the National League of Insured Savings Associations, said in a Chicago speech that the program was "unnecessary government intervention in the housing field."

But, when questioned by United Press International at his Washington office, Morrison conceded the program had exerted "a large influence" in recent months.

He doubted, however, that actual payments by Fanny May, as purchase contracts are consummated, would much effect the availability of mortgage money.

"Some of the mortgages will end up in the private market," Morrison said. He added that in many other cases it is the purchase commitment, not the actual payment, that weighs most heavily.

HOUSTON, Tex.—R. J. DeSutter of St. Louis has been elected a vice president of the Executive Officers Council of the National Association of Home Builders. He will take office Jan. 1.

He is executive director of the Home Builders Association of Greater St. Louis. John T. Terrell of San Antonio, executive vice president of the Texas Association of Home Builders, was elected president. The N.A.H.B. has approximately 40,000 members throughout the country. They are grouped in 308 affiliated associations, directed by the local executive officers.

elected last Tuesday are Clifford M. St. Clair, Columbus, O., first vice president; Clyde E. McGraham, Youngstown, O., secretary and Joseph A. Martineau, Seattle, Wash., treasurer.

Retired Minister Sells Farm in North Missouri

SHELBYVILLE, Mo.—Charles Dees, a retired Lutheran minister living in Fresno, Calif., has sold to Luther Wilson his 119-acre farm property five and a half miles south of Shelbyville. Wilson lives on a neighboring farm.

Consideration in the transaction was $18,650, according to the Harry Callisen Agency of Clarence, Mo., which made the sale. The price included current crops.

The German Lutheran church once was located on one corner of the farm. In recent years the property has been operated by Charles Von Thun.

In Pasadena Park

Residence at 7511 Warwick drive sold by Mr. and Mrs. Henry Snowden to Mrs. Louise M. Norrish through the firm of Esther W. Dierkes. The first floor contains living room, dining room, kitchen, two bedrooms and bath. The second floor is unfinished.

Home in Ladue Sold to President of Auto Agency

Residence of colonial design at 6 Greenbriar bought by Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Willis from the original owner, Mrs. T. H. Mize. Willis is president of Barford Chevrolet Co. The living and dining rooms have solid walnut pegged floors. Doors in the dining room are of Belgian glass. There are five bedrooms, three baths and a large family room with fireplace on the second floor. Ben C. Fink represented the seller and Edward L. Bakewell the buyer.

On South Side

House at 5317 Delor recently sold by Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Buchman Sr. to Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Kayser. Geo. C. Doering, Inc., represented the seller, with Hoenes-Craig Realty Co. as agent for the buyer.

BIDS & PROPOSALS WTD. 286

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
Sealed bids for the construction of the Mark Twain Memorial Shrine, Mark Twain State Park, Monroe County, Missouri, will be received at the office of the Chief of Planning and Construction, State of Missouri, Room 100, State Capitol Building, Jefferson City, Missouri, until 2 p.m., C.S.T., Oct. 14, 1958, and then publicly opened and read aloud. A certified check, bank draft, or a bid bond executed by the bidder and an approved surety company in the amount of five (5%) percent of the bid shall be submitted with each proposal.

The general construction work, the plumbing work, and the electrical work for the Mark Twain Memorial Shrine shall be let under one contract. The heating and air conditioning, including all electric heating elements for this building shall be let under a separate contract. Plans and specifications, proposal, contract forms and information may be secured from the office of the Chief of Planning and Construction, or the architect, Swanson, Terney and Bray, 401-03 Helms Building, 214 10th street, Kansas City 8, Missouri, upon deposit of $25 per set (for each proposed contract desired) in the form of a certified check or cashier's check payable to the Division of Budget and Comptroller, State of Missouri.

By virtue of statutory authority, preference will be given to Missouri labor and to materials, supplies and provisions, and to other articles produced, manufactured, made or grown within the State of Missouri.

Not less than the prevailing hourly rate of wages for work of a similar character in the locality in which the work is performed, all as more fully set out in the detailed plans and specifications shall be paid to all workmen employed on this project.

JOHN D. RYAN JR.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS:
Sealed proposals will be received by the State Board of Education, in the office of the Superintendent of Schools, at the Missouri School for the Blind, 3815 Magnolia av., St. Louis 8, Missouri, until 4:00 p.m., C.S.T., Oct. 14, 1958, for the construction of alterations and additions to Chapel at the Missouri School for the Blind, 3815 Magnolia av., St. Louis 8, Missouri. Plans and complete information may be obtained from Peat, Marwick, Maines and Engineers, 721 Olive St., St. Louis, Mo. Not less than the prevailing hourly rate for work as found by the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations of the State of Missouri, as set forth in the specifications, shall be paid to all workmen performing work on this project. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all proposals, to waive any formalities in bidding and to award contract to other than lowest bidder when it is in the Owner's best interest to do so. Bids may be withdrawn only upon written notice submitted before bid time and date. No proposal may be withdrawn for a period of 30 days after bid date. By virtue of State Law preference will be given to Missouri labor, to Missouri products, supplies and provisions, and to other articles produced, manufactured, made or grown within the State of Missouri.

JOHN D. RYAN JR.

NOTICE TO BIDDERS:
Sealed bids will be received by the City of Fulton, Missouri, until 7:30 o'clock, the 8th day of October, 1958, for construction of two swimming pools and apartments. Plans and Specifications and other contract documents are available from the office of the City Clerk, Fulton, Missouri. A deposit of $25.00 will be required upon receipt of Plans and Specifications, which will be reimbursed upon return of the plans and Specifications in good condition within one week after bid date.

In order to receive consideration, each Bidder shall accompany his Bid with a Certified or Cashier's Check on a solvent bank, or a Bidder's Bond, made payable to the City of Fulton in the amount of 5% of the amount bid.

Bids will only receive consideration when submitted on the Bid Form supplied by the City and with no changes or interjections nor qualifications and no alternatives will be considered which are not specifically called for.

The instructions to Bidders as set out in the Specifications will have to be followed in detail in order for proposal to receive consideration.

The prevailing wage as determined by the Department of Labor and Industrial Relations has to be paid and is specifically set out as Addendum No. 1 to the Specifications.

The City of Fulton, Missouri, reserves the right to waive any and all formalities in award of this contract and the right to reject any or all Bids.

M'CLOY NAMED HEAD OF FORD FOUNDATION

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (AP) — John J. McCloy, banker and former United States High Commissioner in Germany, has been named chairman of the board of the Ford Foundation.

McCloy, who heads the Chase Manhattan Bank, was appointed yesterday to succeed H. Rowan Galtier Jr. in the position with the foundation, the world's richest philanthropic organization.

Galtier will remain a member of the foundation's board of trustees, although he will return to the practice of law in San Francisco.

McCloy has been a foundation trustee since 1953. He will give up some other philanthropic positions he now holds to give more time to his new post. The foundation has about two billion dollars in assets. Dr. Henry T. Heald continues as president.

McCloy will maintain his full-time duties in the Chase Manhattan bank. McCloy, 62 years old, is a former president of the International Bank for Reconstruction and Development.

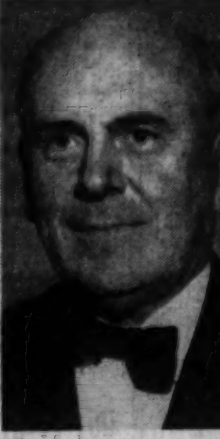

14TH ST. TO BE RESURFACED BETWEEN PINE, WASHINGTON

Fourteenth street between Pine street and Washington avenue will be resurfaced beginning Monday morning, and the work will require about two days, Director of Streets Henry S. Miller announced today.

The present surface will be covered with one and one-half inches of asphaltic concrete from curb to curb.

On Washington boulevard the streetcar track section will be resurfaced between Jefferson and Leffingwell avenues beginning next Friday.

Movie Decline in Britain.
LONDON, Oct. 3 (AP) — Britain's biggest movie house chain last night announced plans to close 80 more theaters.

John Davis, managing director of the Rank organization, said the move was dictated by falling attendance and a lack of good pictures.

UNION MAN TESTIFIES IN A. O. SMITH CASE

Willard Herzog, president of Local 575 of the Boilermakers' Union, testified yesterday that he kept a group of suspected dissenters at the A. O. Smith Corp. plant at Granite City under close surveillance to head off a move to "dissolve the local."

His testimony was given at a hearing on a complaint by the National Labor Relations Board that the plant had discharged 22 men, ostensibly for picketing, but actually to rid the union of members opposed to leadership of Herzog and his fellow officers.

Herzog said he had kept a watch on the suspected insurgents from last Jan. 9 to 21, when a group picketed the plant on United States Highway 67 passing out pamphlets urging action against Herzog's "czar-like" rule of the local.

On one occasion, he said, he sent an associate to a Granite City tavern to learn names of insurgents distributing pamphlets among plant employees congregated there.

A month after the picketing, 35 of the insurgents were tried before a three-man committee composed of boilermakers for "insubordination." The insurgents described the proceedings as a "Kangaroo court" and later filed charges with the NLRB charging they were fired by the plant at the union's insistence.

The hearing is before Trial Examiner Charles L. Ferguson in the Civil Courts building.

U.S. Economy Today

BATTLE OF THE HEATING FUELS

By Sam Dawson

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (AP) — Some 46,000,000 home owners in the United States are facing up today to another economic fact of life — from now on the heating bills will start to mount.

Higher prices this year are likely in many areas as production costs and transportation charges rise. And the chances of price wars benefiting homeowners grows allimer as more factories reopen and eat into fuel stocks.

But the homeowners' struggle to get up the approximately five billion dollars to meet this winter's heating bill is relatively mild compared to the battle among the various types of fuel striving to get a bigger share of the home owners' outlay.

FUEL OIL DEALERS CLAIM the biggest share now—almost half. But natural gas has cut in rapidly on this since the war and now heats around 13,000,000 homes for more than $1,500,000,000. Coal still holds a market of nearly 3,000,000 homes and has new heating gadgets out to entice the home owner. Still tiny, but coming up fast in the last five years, the electrical heating system makers now claim nearly 500,000 homes and boast they will make more than an even 1,000,000 in two and one-half or more years. Heat pumps are used by 25,000 homes. Mostly in the novelty stage now are the homes warmed by solar heat. And in the dream stage is the time when nuclear energy will heat homes.

THE BATTLE BETWEEN fuel oil and gas is pointed up by M. J. Rathbone, president of Jersey Standard Oil, who says, "Natural gas has grown from infant to giant proportions as a competitor" since the war and offers a real challenge to the 40,000 individual oil heat-

Stalking the Big-Spending Sportsman

Today's hunter uses his hobby to fulfill new needs, different from the traditional one for food. This issue of NEWSWEEK explores hunting as a phenomenon in a civilization of plenty, an abundant society... finding that, for all its changes, hunting remains basically an economic affair, but with a 20th Century twist. The hunter no longer needs a market for his prey. He is a market.

NEWSWEEK'S Spotlight on Business answers these questions: Who hunts in America today? How much do they spend? Why does a modern man hunt? The land squeeze—what can be done about it?

Sales Hunters, Take Note: A lot—perhaps a majority—of NEWSWEEK readers are outdoor men in their leisure. But that's not all they are, by a long shot. The NEWSWEEK reader typically holds down a lion's share of responsibility in business, government, a technical field or profession.

To such a man, accuracy is everything. So important, it's on his mind not only in his working hours when he is constantly weighing facts in order to make accurate decisions, but in his leisure time, too.

To sight such a sales target for a rifle or hunting garb or lures or tours you must reach him first, before he gets out there, in his working role as a decision-maker. The way to reach him is through NEWSWEEK, the magazine he selects, reads, and needs because of its accuracy!

Museum Spectacle

Gleaming reproduction of one of the world's most notable works of art—the ceiling of the Sistine Chapel in the Vatican—stretches along 42-foot canopy which is one of the outstanding exhibits in the display of "Illuminations" at City Art Museum. In addition to the Michelangelo work, which is shown in one-quarter scale, the show includes 50 famed paintings presented in the form of color transparencies enlarged to actual size and displayed in illuminated viewing units.

Helping Hands

Salmon snatched from the turbulent waters of the Snake river is on first leg of a detour in its spawning trip up the stream. Scene is site of the Oxbow dam on the Idaho-Oregon border where repairs to fish trap were not completed before salmon run got under way. Emergency conservation program provides taxi service on tank trucks for fish which are netted at Oxbow and turned back into the river above Brownlee dam about 15 miles upstream.

Full-Scale El Greco

Huge work by El Greco, "Burial of the Count of Orgaz," stands out above members of The Friends of the City Art Museum who inspected the show at a preview last night. The El Greco painting, 16 feet high, is the largest in the show. Exhibition, developed and presented by Life magazine, occupies five galleries and will be on display at the museum for a month.

She's Just a Flop As a Bricklayer

THE RAIN IN SPAIN stays mainly in the plain. In our backyard, it rushes over the brick terrace, threatening to wash away the results of our summer-long project.

I keep hearing those radio announcements to the effect that if you think you're in the wrong profession you may go to the Vocational Counseling Service and be tested for your aptitudes. I have never taken one of these tests and have no idea what my aptitudes, if any, might be, but after extensive experience in the field, I've come to the conclusion that I have no talent in the bricklaying line and am not much good as a hodcarrier either.

Bricklaying was ruled out for me very early in our home owning experience. When we moved to this house three years ago, I discovered a little woodland retreat in a far corner of the property. How ideal, I rhapsodized, if we had a brick walk bordered by daffodils ending at the retreat. Mmmmm, said the man of the house. I quickly purchased 1000 bricks before he could change his mind. We had the necessary digging done and he began laying the walk, slowly. Much too slowly, I thought.

I will help, I said eagerly. I was faster at laying brick than he was, but there was something peculiar about my style. It looked a little like Thomas Jefferson's famous serpentine fence lying on the ground. I gave up and went back to easier pursuits, digging holes for daffodil bulbs.

WE HAD SOME BRICKS left over from the woodland walk so we decided we might as well have a barbecue pit. We ran out of bricks before the barbecue pit was finished so we bought 1000 more. Of course we had some left. Since then it's been like trying to make the bread and jelly come out even. We're either in the midst of a project without bricks or at the end of one with bricks.

Last spring we started bricking in the area from the kitchen to the first oak tree. First we thought of encircling the tree, making it the focal point of the patio. Then we heard of a family who did just that. Shortly after the patio was completed, the tree died.

As time went on it became apparent that we would be doing well to reach the tree and join on to the square in front of the barbecue pit. It was like building the Alcan Highway or the Union Pacific; it seemed as if never the twain would meet. This is when I was pressed into service as a hodcarrier, because laying bricks, as the bricklayer pointed out, is not nearly as difficult as selecting usable bricks from the pile of used ones.

THERE ARE THREE KINDS of used bricks, those which are perfect on the porous side but chipped on the good side, those which are perfect on the good side but cracked on the porous side, and those which are perfect on both sides only they're a peculiar purple color. Matching old brick is like trying to match navy blue; you have no idea how many shades there are until you start.

Finding pieces of brick to fit odd corners is impossible no matter how many pieces you have. The thing to do is draw a line and tap with a chisel and—oops try another brick.

At last the two halves of our project met but we didn't break a bottle, forge a gold brick, or do anything spectacular. We just collapsed.

Hugh A. Mulligan Red Hot Series

NEW YORK, Oct. 3 (AP).

WHEN THE OPENING LINEUP is announced tomorrow in the cavernous offices beneath Yankee Stadium, poised, confident John Moriarty will be dressing out for another World Series start.

Wicker basket on white jacketed arm, mustard stick in the alert position, he will coolly step before the assembled 65,000, rear back and fire the big one: "Here yar, getcha red hot franks here!"

Moriarty, a port-sided coin flipper born almost in the shadow of the house that Ruth built, got his start in the big leagues as a second string soda seller, gradually worked his way up to candy butcher and peanut vendor, and after several impressive appearances in relief drew a starting assignment as hot dog buster, the cash clean-up spot to which all rookie concessionaires aspire.

Three full seasons and two World Series behind him, Moriarty, now just turned 18, is at the top of his form. His delivery is shrill and commanding; his diction a gravel based blend of Bronx and Brooklynese that assaults the ear drum with terrifying urgency. He can go deep to make change in the upper deck and make the turn at the mezzanine for a double sale in the box seats.

On a clear day, before a packed house, he can flip a coin 30 rows back into the stands and hit the strike zone with awesome regularity.

"For women," he confided, "we use an under-arm motion, something like the submarine ball Carl Mays used to throw. Men like to have it burned over with a full thumb snap so they can show off on the catch. Control is everything. A wild throw can cost you several big sales while you're burrowing under the seats for a passed quarter."

Like all major leaguers, Moriarty has to contend with a certain amount of irksome horseplay from the sidelines. "When you're passing a frank down the aisle, for instance," he cited past indignities, "some wise guy will always make like he's going to take a bite out of it. Once or twice a character actually did. The same bit with the change: There's always one comedian who tries to put it in his pocket. That's why we prefer the direct flip."

Moriarty's idea of a good day: "Anything but the World Series. It's too crowded to move around and people paid too much money to take their eyes off the game long enough to down a couple of franks. Give me a good cold day, a long dull game and a bunch of kids who got in for free on passes. The kids give you a hard time but they aren't always shouting for you to get out of the way."

"To a series fan, you have to be available and invisible at the same time. But don't get me wrong. I love baseball."

"Here yar, getcha red hot franks right here!"

Mrs. Franklyn Levin of Tulsa, Okla., is the wife of a geophysicist. They have three sons. Her first novel, "The Lonely Room," was published in 1956. She has written three more. Her articles have appeared in the Post-Dispatch, Christian Science Monitor, Kansas City Star and Tulsa World.

By Beatrice Levin

MY 5-YEAR-OLD PHILIP says that when he grows up he wants to be an ice cream man. At that age, our oldest wanted to be a milkman. The middle boy, Alan, used to say he wanted to be a Studebaker.

My husband is raising our boys to be geophysicists. He admits they have free choice; they may be either theoretical or practical physicists. Just after our first child was born, I was dreaming aloud. "Wouldn't it be nice if we had four sons—one a doctor, one a teacher, one—"

"Hmmm," mused Franklyn, "four physicists."

I am raising my boys to be husbands. Lucky indeed is the man who finds his vocational niche in the world, and luckier still the man whose family is a constant source of joy. With so much vocational guidance, a man is increasingly likely to find a career that suits him. With years of study in the field of his choice, he makes his friendships with others who share his interests and knowledge, and he finds, great, rewarding aspects of his career.

Whatever careers my boys choose, either in the professions or as laborers, I hope they'll find rich satisfactions in jobs well done.

I am not so concerned with their future careers as I am about their future families. For every human being there is no greater enduring joy than that which comes from a good and glowing marriage. The one craving which every human being lives with from birth to death is the longing for the love and approval of his family. When a man is loveless he comes to think ill of himself, and as Goethe has pointed out, the worst thing which can befall any man is to lose his self-respect. Then he can do nothing.

A man may lose his job, his money, all his worldly possessions, a limb, an eye, his hearing, and still retain his self-esteem. But a loveless individual cannot even love himself, and he walks through the night where mirrors will not cast back his reflection.

Even brilliant, educated men and women may be painfully ignorant of some aspects of marriage or even what goes into a good family relationship. Such knowledge is not instinctive. Why, then, is marriage the only vocation for which no previous education is considered necessary? Why such a lot of ballyhoo about credit courses in the schools devoted to courtship and marriage? Are these courses not fundamental to the moral and social life of the students, their future families and for our whole civilized community? The achievement of a happy marriage and family life is one of the most satisfying—even glorious—goals for any human being—man or woman.

Sex education has traditionally been the responsibility of the home. Equally traditionally, the home has not always been up to handling that responsibility. Few educators would deny that the ideal situation is one in which parents educate their youngsters in this area—particularly if the parents' attitudes are healthy and their information is correct.

One of the problems which parents face is that of what to say and how to say it. The question of giving acceptance, approval and affection to a child both through your attitudes and your speech is an important one.

My youngest boy, Philip, at 4, walking through the kitchen of a summer camp where I work, was stopped by one of the cooks. She gave him a tremendous hug and said, "We all like you, Philip."

Philip grinned, delighted. "Of course!" he exclaimed, "everybody likes me."

The kitchen crew broke into gales of laughter. As Philip went out the screen door, he turned and announced, "And I like everybody!"

Now Philip's attitude is childish, and Will Rogers' attitude was naive when he announced he had never met a man he didn't like.

Such total acceptance is without discrimination. We are justifiably annoyed and irritated at the loudmouth, the bigot, the mean, the petty, the pushing, the arrogant, the overly-aggressive, the intolerant, the stingy, the free-loader, the braggart; why should we like them?

Well, sir, actually there is a very good reason to try to like them. That person who is least lovable is the most in need of love, and at the moment when he is behaving in a most unworthy and thoroughly obnoxious manner is the moment when his very soul would be saved if someone could say to him, "We love you anyway."

Here we come to the first aspect of raising boys to be husbands. Boys will be boys, destructive, dirty, delinquent, darned noisy. We may disapprove of what they do, but we do not reject nor disapprove of them as individuals. "We love you anyway." Usually what parents consider misbehavior is actually an inconvenience to the parents, and when a family learns to respect each other's needs, possessions and privacy, there is bound to be good personal relationships.

Much is written about children's quarrels. Our solution to the quarreling of children is immediate separation. We have no intention of being so permissive about this that the boys' self-expression results in injury or insult. Children may forget the blow that leaves a black and blue mark, but they may remember all their lives long the insult that cut and wounded to the quick.

The child who is allowed to be a bully, either physically or psychologically (with the barbed word that touches the sensitive heart) grows up to be a poor mate, seeking his revenge and his little triumphs through the bitter thrust at his wife's physical shortcomings or weaknesses. This trait is equally unforgivable in a woman. We've heard the woman who laughs about her husband's baldness or his false teeth or his spreading waistline, and we see her smile that is not a smile, while her husband writhes on the wrack of torture. The whole basis of family life rests on kindness, understanding and consideration. A capacity for compassion is at least as important a quality in a man as a capacity for passion.

Teaching a child to be kind involves a host of examples. From the time they are very little, the boys were taught to respect my hours at my typewriter. This is mother's writing time and she is not to be disturbed except for fire, tornado or imminent death. For many a gifted woman has had to dissipate her energies, her talents and her education because her children were never taught to be kind to mother, considerate of mother, and thoughtful of mother.

The boys see their father's good will. They see it when they follow him into the bathroom and note how he leaves his dirty clothes in the hamper, not on the floor, the bowl in which he has shaved is wiped clean, the towels are hung on racks. Mother is not his slave, nor the slave of the boys. They are capable of getting breakfast for themselves and they do. They help with the marketing. They are expected to pick up their books, toys and clothes and to keep their belongings in some semblance of order. For this relief, Mother adores Daddy and the boys, and warmth, love and good-will reign supreme.

"It is the Man and Woman united that make the complete human being," Benjamin Franklin wrote. "If you get a prudent, healthy wife, your industry in your profession, with her good economy, will be a fortune sufficient."

I'll frame that!

Today's Brain Game

HERE is a quiz based on headlines made last October. Six answers correct are excellent.

1. Who became Attorney General of the United States in October 1957?
2. Why did East Germany suddenly close its border with West Germany last October?
3. Marshal Georgi K. Zhukov was ousted from what post in the Soviet government in October 1957?
4. Which country in October 1957, became the first former enemy of the Allies in World War II to win a seat in the U.N. Security Council?
5. What team won the World Series last October?
6. Can you name the gang leader who was killed in a New York hotel's barber shop last October?
7. Can you name the colonel of Soviet intelligence who was convicted as a spy in Brooklyn, N.Y. last October?
8. Where did Queen Elizabeth attend her first American football game in October 1957?

Answers

1. William P. Rogers. 2. It issued new currency. 3. Minister of Defense. 4. Japan. 5. Milwaukee Braves. 6. Albert Anastasia. 7. Col. Rudolf Abel. 8. College Park, Md.

Facts on Floor Wear

By Hubbard Cobb

RECENTLY we announced the astounding discovery that a linoleum floor gets worn where it receives the most traffic. This applies to other kinds of flooring as well as to linoleum.

A wood floor, for example, will get a lot of wear around doors and on traffic lanes. Eventually the floor finish on these areas will start to wear away and if you let it go too long, all the finish will be worn off. Once this happens, dirt will be ground into the wood and before you can restore the wood to its original color it may be necessary not only to sand but also to bleach the wood.

When you notice that points where traffic is heavy are beginning to show signs of wear, get after them before it's too late. Wipe the area clean with a cloth dampened in turpentine to remove all traces of dirt. If there is any dirt that has become ground into the wood, try to remove it with a light sanding. After this, apply thin coats of varnish or shellac to the area. If the floor has been finished with a floor seal, use this in place of the varnish or shellac.

Rugs and carpets get heavy use around traffic lanes and that's why it's smart to move them about from time to time so that the heavy wear is distributed over the entire rug and not just in a few places. It will also help if you move heavy pieces of furniture a little at frequent intervals so that the legs won't dent the fabric. Of course, you want to use broad castors or glides to reduce denting of the floor covering as much as possible.

Famous Fable

SOLUTION: Several years back, when he was floundering in a sea of financial troubles, Orson Welles received a series of telegrams from one of his creditors requesting payment of an overdue bill. Welles put him off with the assurance that payment would soon be made. Months passed and no check was forthcoming. Finally the creditor sent him an urgent wire into which a note of desperation had crept.

"How shall I get along while I am waiting for the money?" he read.

By return wire came Welles's reply:

"Live simply," he counseled.

How to Do a Western Right

LIKE "Shane" and "High Noon," "THE BIG COUNTRY" at the ESQUIRE THEATRE proves that with a top director and a good script you can take the most time-worn Western situations and make them come to life again. Director William Wyler, one of the best in the business, has done it here with such recognizable elements as the tenderfoot who is dedicated to the ways of peace in a country where violence is the rule and the unrelenting feud between two domineering old cattle ranchers, culminating in a fight over use of the only waterhole around.

Not that "The Big Country" is as fine a picture as "Shane" or "High Noon." It isn't quite that—its script, worked on by five writers including Sy Bartlett and Jessamyn West, isn't cohesive enough, for one thing. But it's a good, strong Western, big in sweep, incisive in its characterizations, and absorbing in its story line.

Mr. Wyler has taken his time to make his people deeper than the usual stock surface characterizations and has brought out the best in some excellent actors. These include Gregory Peck as the ex-sea captain who is a calm, logical man who avoids violence as long as he can, and whose courage is therefore suspect in a land where logic takes the form of the six-gun, the fist, and the noose; Carroll Baker, as his fiancée who grows impatient with him and decides he isn't her type of Western strong man; Jean Simmons as a school-teacher who understands Gregory; Charlton Heston, as the hard, aggressive foreman who shows open contempt for Gregory until he learns differently; Charles Bickford as the tough cattle baron who finds Gregory something of a disappointment as a prospective son-in-law; Burl Ives as his equally hard-bitten mortal enemy, head of a raffish clan; and Chuck Connors as one of his harum-scarum sons.

Mr. Wyler has created some vivid scenes, and managed to make them all seem fresh and vital, right from the start where some drunken cowboys haze the derby-topped dude (Mr. Peck) in front of his humiliated fiancée. The unusual knock-down-and-drag-out fight between the hero and his rival (Peck and Heston) has been made into a comedy affair with the big men battling each other in silence and darkness out on the prairie until each is too exhausted to move. Gregory's private conquering of a mean old bronco is also funny. The big show-down really gives you a lot for your money—a duel, a father killing his own son, an ambush in a canyon, and the two old hot-heads finally shooting it out in personal combat in front of their forces. Mr. Ives, crusty and bitter-tongued, especially dominates the scenes he's in. Altogether, this is rousing stuff.

Baseball, the Devil and Fun

APPROPRIATELY released at World Series time, "DAMN YANKEES," the film version of the walloping stage musical which adroitly combined baseball with the Faustian legend, is at the FOX. They have done everything to make it as close to the stage show as possible, although of course actual baseball game scenes have been brought in, and the results are great. It has all the humor, the slam-bang spontaneity and verve of the stage show. George Abbott, who directed the stage show and did the book along with Douglas Wallop, author of the original novel, "The Year the Yankees Won the Pennant," has had a big hand in this, producing and directing with Stanley Donen and writing the screenplay. The original New York stars, Ray Walston as the debonair Devil, and Gwen Verdon as Lola, his slinky assistant, are in it, along with many of the stage cast. And, for box office, Tab Hunter has been added as Joe, the middle-aged rabid Washington Senators rooster who sells his soul so as to become a 22-year-old baseball star who leads the Senators to a pennant.

Miss Verdon, in her first major screen appearance, is terrific. The lean redhead, as the bewitching 179-year-old witch, altho about in a wonderful burlesque of the sexy siren. Her brassy song, "A Little Brains, a Little Talent," her outrageous wiggles and squirmings in "Whatever Lola Wants, Lola Gets," and the irrelevant but fascinatingly amusing, "Who's Got the Pain When They Do the Mambo?" are highlight of comic dancing and singing.

Mr. Walston, whose glib, acidulous style reminds me a lot of Lee Tracy, puts some crackle into Mr. Applegate, the Devil, although I still don't think he's quite as good as Bobby Clark was in the role here at the American and Mundy Opera. Mr. Hunter seems inspired by the proceedings to get some life into his personality and is very acceptable. There are some other outstanding numbers besides Miss Verdon's mentioned above, including the "You've Gotta Have Heart" classic of inspirational tomfoolery and a completely mad, weirdly colored night-club frenzy. The whole thing is hugely entertaining and funny.

Danny Kaye Batting for the Meek

DANNY KAYE, who has often played the bashful type in his comedies but has always flared forth with brilliant line, triple-tonguing on lightning fast lyrics, plays it straight this time in "ME AND THE COLONEL" at the ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, done from the S. N. Behrman American adaptation of the Franz Werfel play, "Jacobowsky and the Colonel," (with Behrman himself co-authoring the screenplay.)

As S. L. Jacobowsky, Jewish refugee who has been driven out of four countries and now is fleeing France ahead of the Nazi invasion, Danny is the personification of the meek who uses brains and subtlety to inherit the earth. The play neatly juxtaposes him with an opposite type, a Polish colonel also fleeing, who is a flamboyant, blustering man of action, honor and amatory success, and is also anti-Semitic. Curt Jurgens gives the Colonel a broad, choleric reading which makes a nice foil for Danny's soft underplaying. The play has some wit, and Mr. Kaye's performance has a velvet warmth which makes it very appealing. Nicole Maurey is charming as the Colonel's French girlfriend who finally falls for the meek little man, and Alexander Scourby does a nice job as a German major with a taste for the better things in life, including Nicole.

Swedish Enigma

THE SWEDES always were ones for tolerant views in their films, but I doubt if you've ever run into anything more broadminded than "TIME OF DESIRE," at the APOLLO. Director-writer Egil Holmsen has given us a gentle story about two young sisters, radiant, lovely girls, approaching womanhood, who have been thrown on their own resources by the fact that their father, a widower, a lusty horse-dealer, spends most of his time gaming or sporting with the assorted domestic female help.

One girl shows at least an incipient unnatural affection for the other, and becomes wildly jealous when the latter succumbs to the charms of a local swain, and so seeks consolation in religion. Her sister, in trouble, pulls a switch by refusing to marry her betrayer, having fallen out of love with him. She has her baby, of which her father delightedly approves, and goes back to her sister, and they all presumably live happily ever after.

Just what Mr. Holmsen is getting at here is uncertain, and I'm not at all sure it's wholesome. Anyway, he is a director of perception and poetic touch, having a neat way with two water lily blossoms floating together, and his actors are capable. Barbro Larsson and Margaretha Lowler, as the girls, are fresh and sensitive. There is, of course, the nude swimming scene, without which no Swedish picture would be Swedish these days.

Voice That Pierces Iron Curtain

Radio Free Europe Is Link With Outside World for 70,000,000 Captive People

A Yonkers (N.Y.) boy sends greetings via tape recording to his grandmother in Hungary. Holding microphone is TIBOR FLORIAN, who handles message programs for Radio Free Europe.

EVA STANKOVA, who fled from Reds in Prague, is disc jockey of jazz program, "Date With Eva."

By Virginia Irwin

A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—WHEN RADIO FREE EUROPE first began broadcasting eight years ago to eastern European nations, it was a puny voice carrying only 10 hours of programs a week.

Today RFE is a powerful force which pours facts into the Iron Curtain countries on a round-the-clock schedule seven days a week. It provides some 70,000,000 captive people with latest news of world events.

Through RFE's 29 mighty transmitters in West Germany and Portugal, the peoples of Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Romania and Bulgaria learn of each new development in the Far East crisis. And in addition to domestic news of America and other free-world nations, listeners get over RFE factual reports about events in their own countries and in Soviet Russia—news which the Communists suppress or distort.

RFE, supported entirely by contributions of American citizens to the Crusade for Freedom, has gained a reputation for truth and reliability despite the best efforts of the Communists to discredit it. At the time of the Hungarian revolution in November 1956, the Reds put on a terrific propaganda campaign accusing RFE of promising the Hungarian people military aid from the West. The West German government and the Council of Europe made exhaustive studies of all RFE programs which had been broadcast before and during the revolution and concluded that charges made against the station were without foundation.

Ten minutes of live news, every hour on the hour, is the backbone of RFE's programming schedule, but the network covers a range of material comparable to any domestic American radio station.

Daily commentaries enable listeners in the countries under Soviet domination to interpret events and trends within their own countries in relation to developments elsewhere. There are also special programs for young people, workers, intellectuals, farmers, women, children and other special groups. Religious services and news are broadcast to listeners of all faiths. Cultural programs, music, drama, entertainment, on-the-spot coverage of major events, sports, satire and special interviews round out a program schedule designed to attract the largest possible audience.

The people who write and broadcast RFE's programs are exiles who escaped from behind the Iron Curtain. Chosen for their professional skill as newsmen, announcers, commentators, analysts and performers, they work closely with Americans at RFE who manage and supervise the overall operation.

One of the most interesting programs is "Free Society," written by a Polish journalist, Stefan Gacki. He has visited farms, coal mines, housing projects, trailer camps, the telephone company and even backyards of suburbanites in his quest for what makes America tick. He has described for his European audience the social security plan, 4-H Clubs, Boy Scouts, company plans for employees and hundreds of other facets of American life.

Another popular program is "Date With Eva" in which Eva Stankova, a fledgling musical comedy star in Prague before she escaped from Communist oppression in 1947, plays the latest record releases of American jazz artists. A 20-minute program broadcast six days a week to East Europe, "Date With Eva" is now in its seventh year. Tape-recorded in New York and broadcast from Munich, Germany, the program is one of the favorites among RFE's lighter offerings.

Also produced in New York is "The Hungarian Radio Theater," a dramatic offering featuring stars from the National Theater in Budapest, Eve Soreny and Sandor Szabo, both of whom escaped from Hungary with their families during the revolution in 1956. This program has presented many American plays including "Remember Mama," "Bell Book and Candle" and, earlier this year, "Abe Lincoln in Illinois." The Lincoln play was especially well received in Hungary where Lincoln is a great hero because of his support for the Hungarian cause during the War of Independence in 1852.

RFE reporter, at right, interviews an escapee for a firsthand report from Czechoslovakia.

Comedian JARA KOHOUT conducts "Kohout's Cabaret."

Jara Kohout, a comedian who escaped in 1948 and who is known to Czechs and Slovaks all over the world; "Young Eagles," a variety program including interviews with Polish students in exile, letters from young Polish people all over the world, news of scouting, sports cars and true stories of heroic young people; and "Radio Doctor," broadcast to Czechoslovakia, Poland and Bulgaria, which is designed to substitute for a Western medical journal. Written by doctors and addressed to the medical profession, this program reports on achievements in medicine in a free world.

Each Sunday RFE broadcasts church services to the five captive countries and during the week has programs of religious news. Programs like "Fighting Church" broadcast to Czechoslovakia counter anti-religious propaganda of the Communist regime. A live mass is transmitted each Sunday from the London Brompton Oratory for broadcast to Poland; church music, liturgy and sermons are recorded in the Slovakian language at the Reformed Slovak Lutheran Church in Lansdowne, Pa., for broadcast to Czechoslovakia. Special Jewish holidays are observed with talks and messages from prominent Jewish leaders and rabbis.

At Christmas, Easter, Passover, Chanukah and other religious holidays, RFE devotes many of its regular broadcast hours to special holiday programming. And for the children of Poland, Polish-American youngsters in a school in Passaic, N.J., present variety programs at Christmas, Easter, Fourth of July and on such other special occasions as the opening of school and Halloween.

In time of disaster or emergency RFE acts as a channel of communication between refugees and those forced to remain behind. During the Hungarian revolution, RFE relayed literally thousands of messages from escapees to loved ones who could not get out. Information provided by refugees from behind the Iron Curtain is carefully evaluated and filed, enabling RFE to maintain an up-to-date check on events and conditions in the captive countries.

Programs are broadcast over five to seven transmitters simultaneously, enabling listeners to pick up each program on one of several points of their radio dials and thus circumvent jamming. One jam-proof technique is what RFE officials call the "saturation service," whereby all transmitters are directed in turn for a half-hour period every night to each of the captive countries. This saturation service is also used on special occasions to transmit news and information that the Communist regimes are desperately anxious to conceal from the people.

It has been estimated that RFE programs are jammed from approximately 225 different locations behind the Iron Curtain—most of them in Russia, an official of the station explained. "More than 1000 jamming transmitters are used in this effort. This vast jamming operation indicates how deeply the Kremlin and its puppet Communist regimes fear the effects of the truth."

RFE prides itself on its speedy and accurate news service. For instance, within an hour after verification of the text of the famous Khrushchev denunciation of Stalin at the Twentieth Party Congress, RFE trained 10 of its powerful transmitters — two for each target country — on the Iron Curtain and began to repeat the speech hour after hour for 3½ solid days. Thus RFE scored a remarkable newsbeat.

Radio Free Europe's main headquarters is in New York and some 15 per cent of the total programming is produced in the United States, with the other 85 per cent emanating from RFE's European headquarters in Munich, West Germany. It has news and information centers throughout Europe.

There is a central news room, which operates on a round-the-clock basis to compile some 350,000 words of western and captive world information each day. Among its news-gathering resources is a vast monitoring service, which tunes in more than 50 radio stations and teletype news services behind the Iron Curtain, including those in the USSR. Thus RFE is able to expose and refute Communist lies and promises.

"At no time do RFE programs recommend action, indulge in exhortations or denunciations of wrongs which are already apparent to its listeners suffering under Communist rule," RFE officials assert. "Rather, the programs inform, clarify and focus attention on facts the people must know in order to calculate their actions wisely. The facts are put by RFE into realistic perspective in such a way as to enable listeners to move ahead—intelligently, patiently and inexorably, but without futile bloodshed—from their current positions toward the final goal they overwhelmingly desire: full and durable freedom and democracy."

The station, which operates on the remarkably small budget of $10,000,000 a year is the target of continuous attacks by the Soviet Union, its puppet regimes and the Communist press in the free world.

Not to be overlooked is the spiritual force underlying RFE programs. President Eisenhower declared: "Radio Free Europe is supplying the truth. Men and women who might otherwise have succumbed to the philosophy that it is good to be slaves, still keep alive the spark of freedom in their hearts. This work serves not only the nations we seek to help—it serves the best interests of the United States."

ing those in the USSR. Thus RFE is able to expose and refute Communist lies and promises.

Answers to Quiz.

Answer.

South makes his no-trump slam by a squeeze-endplay on East, who is marked with an original holding of five hearts, five diamonds and three cards in the black suits.

After taking the second round of hearts declarer plays the king of clubs and follows with the queen, squeezing East. East can't afford to discard a red card, so he must throw the eight of spades. Now it is safe for declarer to throw East in the lead because he has no spade to return to West's ace.

Declarer cashes the king-queen-jack of diamonds and continues a low diamond, ending with the 10. East must return a heart from the 10, giving dummy the nine-queen-jack of hearts at the end. South loses only a diamond trick.

Wax Remover

An excellent way to remove old wax is to mix three tablespoons of raw linseed oil and one tablespoon of turpentine to one quart of hot water. Wipe it on, remove the excess and wipe dry. After wood is thoroughly dry, give a new coat of wax. This does a better job if hot. Keep it that way by placing the container in a pan of hot water.

Let's Explore Your Mind

By Sylvanus and Evelyn Duvall

Answer to Question 1.
GOOD. One recent study, for instance, finds that women who married when they were very young, before they had the advantage of much education, were dissatisfied when they reached middle-age. Those who married later, after they had completed their education, were more satisfied in their middle years after their children had grown. Of course, there's no real reason why a woman who wants to get more education shouldn't go back to school when her children have grown. Lots of us do it these days.

Answer to Question 2.
No. According to mental hygienist Nina Ridenour, making a child who hurts others feel "bad" may make him worse. Instead she recommends taking away the hurting object (calmly, firmly, always); separating the children, and getting the children to play happily together again. A child must understand that he can't hurt other people. But the way to teach him is to understand how he feels, to help him feel loved, and have acceptable outlets for his feelings.

Martha Carr's

OPINION

A Split Foursome

Today's column is devoted to teen-agers who are invited to submit their problems to Martha Carr.

Dear Martha:

I AM 17 and have a boy friend the same age. We have been seeing each other for more than six months. At first we dated every night. Then we stopped seeing each other so often. I don't know what happened but anyway I still think he likes me and he is always nice to me at school. My girl friend likes his boy friend. Everything was going fine until we went to a party together and the evening ended with the other boy liking me and my date liking my girl friend. Now I don't know how to get this first boy back and get the second one to like my girl friend again. I want to be friends with them.

HEARTBROKEN.

There's nothing like trading dreamboats in the middle of the party! If they hadn't started going steady by the time they reached home, you could still put up a good fight for him. But make sure he's the one you want before you split up the foursome. Sometimes beaux are easier to come by than good friends.

Dear Martha:

I AM 15 and a sophomore in high school. I am good looking and could have many boy friends except for one thing. Whenever I get a boy friend we go together a couple of weeks then break up and find someone else. I have just broken up with a boy whom my friends consider one of the best looking boys they have ever seen. They think I am mean to have broken up with him. Now I like a boy who doesn't like me because of my reputation. I don't mean to be this way but I can't help it. What would you do?

VERONICA.

If you don't "mean" to be this way, then why are you? Can't you just make up your mind that you won't break up with a boy just because you get a little tired of him? Don't start finding fault or picking fights. Maybe one of your troubles is that you let yourself fall so hard that when you bounce back to reality you find out he's not as wonderful as he seemed. But try not to be so concerned with his appearance. It's what's in back of his face that counts.

Dear Martha:

I LIKE A CERTAIN BOY very much but every time we meet I am speechless. I'm sure he thinks I'm very rude and don't like him. Several girls say this happens to them when they meet boys they like. Please tell me what to do.

WORRIED.

You can always say, "Hi, how are you?" And you can always smile. Practice up on this and worry about the small talk later. Once a boy stops to talk, thinking of things to talk about isn't too hard.

Eleanor Roosevelt

Russia's 'Helen Keller'

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.

A FEW MORNINGS before leaving Moscow I visited the Ministry of Education briefly to ask a few questions I was not yet clear on. He gave me a beautiful book of children's paintings and drawings which has led me to feel I must visit someday the art school for gifted children. He also gave me a number of children's books and I promised to send him a similar number of our publications for children. In Russia the Ministry of Education publishes all of its own books.

When I left him I visited the Institute for Defectology, a research institute where many interesting experiments with children are in progress. One girl, about 13 years old, is called Helen Keller. She is blind and deaf and dumb, but the people in charge assured me that she will be able to speak naturally in another three years.

This youngster seems to have an amazing talent for creating models. Probably the most important of these are little models of hands in all the positions covering the alphabet in the touch system. She also has made models of the interior of her home as she knows it, including a few objects inside, as well as the exterior as it really stands.

At this institution, also, they are doing research in the treatment of spastics, which seemed to me to be very hopeful. I could have spent many hours there and could hardly bear to leave in time to reach the American Embassy for lunch with Richard H. Davis, our Minister Counselor.

Our Embassy houses in apartments on different floors various of the Embassy families. As we walked into the courtyard and found the door leading to the elevators, a truck was being unloaded by two bright-looking young boys. Rather hesitantly I asked for directions and was surprised to have one of them answer me in an unmistakable American voice: "Can I help? Let me see. Oh, Mr. Davis is on the seventh floor."

Last Sunday morning Mrs. David Gurewitsch and I visited the Kremlin to see Lenin's apartment. It impressed me again as much as it did last year with its appearance of simple and Spartan-like living—no rugs on the floors, shades at the windows but no curtains. There are few photographs and only one picture.

Lenin's sister, who lived with him and his wife, had her bedroom partitioned off the living room by a screen, she had a little rug by her bed and one or two bits of decoration on her dressing table—and one wonders if Lenin and his wife disapproved!

The study has world maps on the wall and books are close at hand. The feeling one gets is that this man worked incessantly, yet he preached that there must be time for work and time for rest and enjoyment as well—a precept he must have obeyed only rarely.

Out of all this simplicity has come our complicated world of today—and I wonder would Lenin be surprised at developments in his own country.

I feel you might like to know how the beds are made up in Russia, so I am going to tell you.

In the hotels each bed has a box spring with a thin pad on top. The sheets are heavy linen, the bottom one of the two being tightly stretched over the pad and tucked in. The top sheet is a bag with a diamond-shaped large opening at the top. A heavy quilt is slipped in, the bottom is then turned up, and the two sides at the top are turned in. Then, after the Chinese fashion, you crawl into your cocoon from the top and tuck it tightly around you.

If it is very cold you put on top as many extra covers as you need. It seems like the best way to make a bed for warmth in the cold Moscow climate, and I am thinking of trying it for the winter months at Hyde Park.

Introduction to Ozark Beauty

By Leonard Hall

A THING we enjoy is introducing friends from other parts of the United States to our Missouri Ozarks. Often when thus engaged we surprise ourselves at the amount of scenic beauty and backwoods flavor that can be packed into a day. These hills, as most Missourians know, are the oldest on our continent. There was a time, a quarter billion years ago, when they thrust their rugged crests to heights of several thousand feet. Now erosion has worn them to gentler slopes, often leaving bare granite exposed along the ridge-tops. In some places, however, the cap-rock is of limestone originally deposited during one of the many ocean inundations that have covered this area. Thus the very structure of the Ozarks is interesting.

Somewhat the idea of taking a visitor to see the man-made lakes created by damming our clear-water rivers never occurs to us. These artificial bodies of water are found in every state. Their unnatural and often raw-looking shore lines are the same everywhere and merely alter the landscape without improving it. Nor do the impoundments we have in Missouri seem to generate any vast amount of power, create lower electric rates or lure great industries to the Ozark country.

Aside from the beauty of the forested hills, just now beginning to show a touch of autumn color, it is the rivers and springs that give the Ozarks their character and charm. These are the things we try to show our visitors — and last week it happened to be Dorothy Dingley of the National Audubon Society who was helping edit our Ozark movie that will have its premiere showing in the Washington University series in December.

After several days of the intensive work which this editing requires, it was not hard to convince ourselves that we needed a few hours off. So on a sunny morning Ginny packed her picnic baskets and we loaded Tiger into the car and were away down Highway 21 to Ellington and then west on 106 to Powder Mill Ferry on Current river. As usual, Frank Sutton transported us to the far side on his cable-operated craft and then we persuaded LeRoy Lewis to lay his work aside long enough to run us down to Blue Spring in his John boat. While we made these arrangements, Tiger struck up a somewhat uneasy friendship with LeRoy's pack of a dozen hounds.

We all enjoyed the short run down the river and the hike up the path to where Blue Spring rises silently beneath its high cliff. The pool was clearer than we have seen it all summer so that a white pebble tossed out into it could be seen drifting slowly downward for many feet. Around the spring, blue lobelia and asters were in bloom and we had no difficulty convincing our guest that here was one of the loveliest sights in America — and that the Ozarks offer a remarkable combination of friendly people and picturesque scenery.

The road from Owl's Bend to Eminence and then out to Alley Spring is especially beautiful at this time of year when the dogwood is beginning to turn and an occasional gum tree shows deep red and the distant hills are wrapped in the soft light of autumn. The spring itself is located in a small state park and this made a pleasant place to eat our picnic lunch. Alley flows some 80,000,000 gallons a day and gathers its water from a large area to north and west. Some of its sources are evidently close to the surface, for its readily affected by local rains and we found it slightly milky. The limestone bluff that encircles the spring was dripping with moisture and never have we seen such masses of blue lobelia as grow here.

As we ate beside the spring branch, Luther Rowlett dropped by to visit us. Luther is an interesting fellow who earns a modest livelihood by diving to salvage equipment lost by fishermen whose boats are over-turned on Current river and Jacks Fork. He has taught many Shannon county youngsters to be excellent swimmers and is himself as much at home on the river bottom as he is in the upper air. Luther is also something of a poet and contributes columns to the Eminence newspaper; and in the winter, he makes his way to Florida to work in the vegetable harvest. On this occasion he entertained us with an account of the adventures of Buck Nelson of Mountain View on his recent trip to the moon via flying saucer.

The Drive up Highway 19 from Eminence is one of the most picturesque in Missouri. The road traverses a tract of virgin pine maintained by the Conservation Commission and to spend a few minutes of high ridges and deep hollows stretching away to every side. A highway bridge crosses Current river at Round Spring which is smaller than Alley or Blue but is especially interesting for the huge beds of water-cress that line the spring branch. The small state park here was so immaculately maintained that we stopped to compliment Superintendent Chilton and visit for a moment with his daughter Yvonne.

At Shannondale Community House, a few miles farther north, we were glad to find the pastor, the Rev. Vincent Bucher, at home and to spend a little time with him. This mission of the Evangelical and Reformed Church plays a big part in the lives of the people who live along upper Current river and Vincent has worked in this vineyard for many years. He is a gentle fellow of great goodwill and with the practical turn of mind necessary for his ministry. Before we left, he had presented us with a 40-pound cushion squash from his compost-rich garden and an armful of sweet potatoes that would run six to a 12-quart bucket. So we drove the last 60 miles home to Possum Trot through the warm autumn twilight, feeling both spiritually and materially rewarded by our day afield.

Autumn Shoes

Women who step out in color this fall must be on their toes. Designers say the violent colors of new fashions need pale-toned shoes to both subdue and stress the shades. A purple satin cocktail dress takes pale lavender pumps, vivid reds require shoes in a pink cast, intense greens are modified with shoes in pale, yellow-toned greens. Complement the color effect with long leather gloves which repeat the tone of the shoes.

THE ABC-TV network will undertake a "first" in TV drama Sunday night when it begins presenting a series of four one-hour plays from a Canadian studio. The all-Canadian productions, under the general title of "Encounter," will come from the world's newest TV plant, Studio 7 in Toronto, which opened a few days ago. KTVI will carry the dramas at 8:30 p.m. the next four Sundays.

LORETTA YOUNG will be back for her sixth season on KSD-TV Sunday night. Dinah Shore is returning for a new season in the "Chevy Chase" the same night. Charles Van Doren joins the "Today" family as a permanent member Monday. He WILLIE MAY'S of the San Francisco Giants and Jackie Jensen of the Boston Red Sox will match baseball on KSD-TV tomorrow night. On the "brains" team will be James Laver, curator of the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, and Sally Kirkland, fashion editor of Life magazine.

THE WILMA SIM home-making program on KSD-TV will change time next week moving from its old 8:35 a.m. spot to 8:05 Monday through Friday. The five-minute local morning newscasts also will be on at new times at 7:05 and 8:05. There will be NBC-TV network news at 7.

WELL, I HAD ANOTHER GOOD FIND WITH THE "SHOPPERSCOPES"...SOLD TWENTY MORE OF 'EM! THAT MAKES 38 SOLD SO FINE!

AT FIRST THE HOUSEWIFE WENT INTERESTED WHEN I SHOW HER THE SMALL TELESCOPE, BUT AFTER I EXPLAIN HOW GREAT IT IS FOR MAKING OUT A PRICE TAG IN A WINDOW DISPLAY, SHE'S A CINCH TO BUY ONE!

SAY...DO YOU REALIZE I'VE ALREADY GOTTEN BACK THE $69 I PAID YOU FOR THE 200 TELESCOPE?

THAT'S ABSOLUTELY THE DUMBEST THING I EVER DID!

BUT HE GOES OUT AND WORKS, JUDGE!

YOU SAY THAT RIFLE HAD BEEN THROWN INTO MY FORD, RIF?

YES, HARRISON, AND I'M SURE BALLISTIC TESTS WILL SHOW THAT IT KILLED ALAN GASTON...

GIVE IT TO ME AND COME UP TO THE HOUSE FOR SOME DRY CLOTHES. I'LL SEE THAT CHIEF STONE GETS IT.

OH, I'LL TAKE IT TO HIM. I'M TOO INTERESTED IN THIS CASE HOW TO MISS ANYTHING.

TOO INTERESTED IS RIGHT, RIF, YOU'RE SIGNING YOUR OWN DEATH WARRANT!

DEL REA 10-3

RELAX, GORGEOUS. I SWEAR, I'M NOT JACK THE RIPPER. I'M JUST A HARMLESS, AGING PLAYBOY!

NO ROUGH STUFF, BUDDY—THIS IS A RESPECTABLE JOINT!

I'LL BEHAVE. NOW TAKE YOUR CLAIMS OFF MY ARM.

NOW TELL ME THE STORY OF YOUR LIFE—AND DON SKIP A SINGLE SENTIMENTAL DETAIL!

THE...STORY...OF...MY LIFE...?

Illustrated by Irving Schuster-Schiffman

GOSH! HOW I HATE PUSSY-CATS!

I HATE 'EM!
I HATE 'EM!
I HATE 'EM!

OFF THE SHORE OF A MIDDLE EAST COUNTRY, A SUBMARINE EASES TO THE SURFACE.

NOT BAD NAVIGATORS, BU-SAWYER. EXACTLY WHERE WE WANT TO BE. THERE'S THE TWO GREEN LIGHTS SIGNALING US FROM THE SHORE.

OKAY, MR. SAWYER. IF YOU CAN CLIMB INTO THE BUCKING AFT WITHOUT GETTING WET, WE'RE ALL SET FOR THE BEACH.

PANEL 1: DON'T BE SCART, HONEY! THESE GUNS CAN'T SHOOT! ...DO YOU STILL HAVE YOUR CHARM BRACELET?

PANEL 2: WHY, YES -- BUT...

PANEL 3: I WANT TO GIVE YOU SOMETHING TO ADD TO IT, HONEY!

PANEL 4: TAKE THIS CARTRIDGE TO A JEWELER! HAVE HIM REMOVE THE SLUG AND PUT A RING IN IT!

PANEL 5: PROMISE YOU'LL DO IT RIGHT AWAY! IT CAN -- MEAN SO MUCH!

PANEL 6: OKAY! I... I... PROMISE, COLT!

ARE YOU REALLY SERIOUS ABOUT THIS PAINTING KICK, JILL?

IT'S NOT A "KICK" I WAS WASTING MY LIFE AWAY THIS FALL... ON SILLY THINGS LIKE PIETS, BOYS, AND THE "JIVE HIVE"!

BUT WHEN MR. MENROLA AND AL PERSON LIKED MY PICTURE I KNEW I HAD FOUND MY PLACE IN TIME!

NOW I'M PLANNING MY NEXT MOVE, LADIES! BE SERIOUS! CAN YOU GET THIS CHILD IS LONG GONE!

JACK, YOU KNOW ME — WE WORK TOGETHER!

NEVER SAW YOU BEFORE — WHAT IS WORK?

I'LL BRING HIM BACK.

JACK, HE DID MAKE FORGOTT EVERYTHING—

AW, I DON'T BELIEVE IT, ED.

NOW—JACK'S TURN TO WATCH. LET'S SAY ED'S FORGOTTEN EVERYTHING SINCE HE WAS THREE—

I WANT MY MOMMY. MOMMY! MOMMY!

A four-panel comic strip from 'The Spirit'. The first panel shows a woman in a dark dress being escorted by two men in suits towards a propeller airplane on a tarmac. A speech bubble from one man says, 'SHE'S STOPPING TO YAK WITH THE PROSECUTOR AGENT.' Another speech bubble from the woman says, 'WARM UP.' The second panel shows a man in a pilot's uniform talking to a woman in a pilot's uniform. He says, 'YOUR CREW ARE A BIT HUNTERY - YOU'RE NOT SCHEDULED TO THE COCKPIT FOR A WHILE.' She replies, 'I NEVER SUBSTITUTED THE BOYS IN THE WHIP!' The third panel shows a man in a suit and tie sitting in a car, talking to a pilot. The man in the suit says, 'WISH SHE'D KNOCK OFF. WE'RE GOT TO GET OUT OF HERE!' The pilot replies, 'WHY DON'T WE TAKE OFF AND LEAVE HER BEHIND?' The fourth panel is a continuation of the conversation between the man in the suit and the pilot.

THE NOSE has two main purposes—to enable us to smell and to help in breathing. It also is of service in several less important ways.
 Thanks to our nostrils, air is able to come in and go down to the lungs. The lungs extract oxygen and place it in the blood stream.
 Inside the nose are passages
 Hairs grow inside the nose. These hairs do much to strain dust and soot from the air.
 During cold weather, people have an added reason to thank their noses. The cold air is warmed as it passes through winding passages in the nose, and it may come close to reaching blood temperature before it enters the lungs.
 The nose is the seat of your sense of smell.

which catch odors arising from various things. A housewife smells (or at least should smell) the odors of a rotten egg. In that way she can save the family from a misfortune.

People are far behind animals in their sense of smell. A dog may pick up the scent of a rabbit which, two or three hours before, has bounded over the ground. A human being, on the other hand, would fail to pick up such a scent even half a minute later.
